What is Ahead?
Muscles Soon Old
Sharks Ate Thirty-four Good Men Come From Bad

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1935, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

IN 1914, as the world gradually moved toward war, no one in Europe realized what was happening or going to happen.

In 1935, as this country moves toward the result of various theories, experiments and efforts, nobody has the vaguest idea of what is really about to happen.

Almost anything MIGHT happen. It is possible, and fortunately probable, that what has happened before will happen again, that business and industry will gradually find their way back to normal, and, with officially shortened hours making labor scarce, the slogan may change from "Let the government support me" to "Give me a chance to work, and climb to the top."

That may come, and something very different may come.

Once in so often it is necessary for nations and individuals to learn wisdom through first-class failure. That may be on the program for this country at this moment. The wise man will make his arrangements.

Time passes quickly, age comes soon if you depend for success on muscles, legs, arms or eyes. Fifteen years ago, Babe Ruth, "home run king," was bought by "The Yankees" for $125,000, highest price ever paid up to that time for a baseball player. Now, only 41 years old, he is released and goes to the "Boston Braves," who are not asked to pay even a penny for the man that has drawn millions of men and dollars to the club that "owned" him.

Fortunate are they whose power to earn a living resides inside their skulls. Titian was painting magnificently, when he died of plague, past ninety; Voltaire was long past eighty when all Paris united to honor his brilliant intellect and "kill him with kindness." Goethe was over seventy when he wrote the second part of "Faust," and one of the greatest French writers, who established a new French prose style, was past eighty-five when he wrote the book that made him famous. Brains are more reliable than muscles for a long career.

From the Windward Islands comes an account of an excursion boat capsizing, with "fears that sharks had eaten thirty-four that disappeared."

The theory that sharks will not attack human beings does not hold in warm waters, where sharks are numerous and long swimming has tired the victim.

John Tyndall, walking home beside a swamp, looking at crayfish, reflected as he walked along, "If I should fall into the swamp, John Tyndall would become part of the brain of a crayfish, whereas if I took a few of the fish home and ate them, they would become part of the brain of John Tyndall."

Matter is marvelously interchangeable. If thirty-four drowned off the Windward Islands were eaten by sharks, they are, by now, part of numerous shark brains.

If you worry about our brood of racketeers, criminals, torturers, murderers, you may find comfort for future generations in the descendants of the crew of the ship "Bounty," that mutinied, turned their officers adrift on the Pacific Ocean, and settled on Pitcairn Island, lonesome, desolate.

Dr. H. L. Shapiro, anthropologist in New York's Museum of Natural History, having visited the island, says descendants of the mutinous and murderous sailors are "quite charming." Even six generations of inbreeding have not prevented improvement in character.

Nature and heredity struggle constantly to eliminate what is bad and preserve what is good.

You find citizens of criminal settlements, made up originally of thieves and murderers, energetic and thoroughly desirable citizens. We improve in spite of ourselves.

Two Millen brothers, Irving and Murton, and Abraham Faber, convicted of murdering a Massachusetts policeman, were sentenced yesterday to the electric chair, the judge, as usual, concluding his sentence: "And may God have mercy on your souls."

Why God is requested to have mercy in the next world on those upon whom civilization has no mercy in this, has never been made clear.

In this instance, Irving Millen, stepped toward the judge and yelled defiantly: "Don't worry. He will."

Both Millen brothers told the judge they had been "cheated of a fair trial."

Abraham Faber, who confessed, said the detective promised him life imprisonment, and added:

"I must have been crazy. I believed him."

It would be interesting to know whether those three men will have another trial after the electric current sends them out of this world, and, if so, what the verdict will be.

Millens Near Death Cells

MAY Be Moved TONIGHT

BILL RUSHED TO ALLOW SHIFT

The Millens and Faber may be transferred from Dedham jail to state prison tonight.

And they may be immediately locked up in the three cells of the death house, a few steps from the electric chair in which they were yesterday sentenced to die during the week of April 28.

Arangements for a big state police guard over the route of transfer, and for extra precautions at the prison, were being made today as legislative leaders speeded up the new law enabling the transfer.

Suspension of all rules by both branches of the legislatore and adoption of an emergency preamble making the law retroactive and immediately effective were urged in the state house today in connection with the bill making mandatory the transfer to prison of doomed men immediately after sentence.

Senate President Moran and Senator Samuel W. Wragg of Dedham were speeding enactment and the bill was expected to be ready for Lieutenant-Governor Hurley's signature tonight—in which event the transfer will be made at onie.

Hurley said he would sign the bill immediately after its enactment

Because of the previous escape efforts of the Millens and the nature of their last statements in court yesterday, Warden Hogsett will place the trio in the death

Man in Icy Brook Saved

Pulled From Alewife Brook by Human Chain

William Hurd, 43, of Thorndike street, Arlington, is dying from exposure, immersion and shock after falling into Alewife brook, Arlington, today.

He was in the icy water 15 minutes before Somerville police and civilians completed a rescue chain to pull him out.

Blinded by snow at the height of the storm, Hurd was hurled by the wind down a graduated wall into the brook near Woodstock street, Arlington, at the Somerville line.

His shouts were heard by Herbert F. Hart of Belknap street, Somerville, who hailed a passing motorist, Elmer Sawyer of Hibiscus street, Waltham.

Sawyer threw Hurd the back cushion of his car to keep him afloat.

Patrolmen John L. Cameron, Leo Reardon and William Johnson, with the two civilians, formed the human chain that rescued him.

'L' HOLDUP Bandits Given STIFF TERMS

Michael J. "Spike" Hennessey, 26, of Franklin Gardens, Roxbury, today was sentenced to 12 to 20 years in state's prison for his part as leader in the Dudley street El station holdup.

Sentence was passed on him and his four associates by Judge John M. Gibbs. All were charge with armed robbery.

John Hoar, 22, also of Franklin Gardens, Roxbury, was sentenced to 6 to 10 years' imprisonment.

Samuel Schwartz, 21, of Bickford street, Roxbury, was given 2½ to 3 years in Charlestown, but the sentence was revoked and he was sent to Concord.

John Samarjian, of Whittier street, Roxbury, was sentenced to Concord Reformatory for five years and a day.

Also sent to Concord was Leo Hayes, 21, of Brockline, for an indefinite term.

Authorities charged the five men, armed with machine guns, held up an Elevated cash truck, its driver and two guards last September 27, and escaped with $2800.

In a voice so low it was not heard by the court, Samarjian called "dirty rat" to Hayes, who turned state's evidence.

Court denied motion of Hennessey's attorney, Joseph P. Walsh, to retract Hennessey's plea of guilty. Walsh said he was given to understand that his client would receive a sentence of only 30 months if he pleaded guilty.

NRA 7-A Clause ILLEGAL

U. S. LOSES IN WEIRTON SUIT

By International News Servicee

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 27—The NRA suffered a major defeat today in the long-awaited decision in the celebrated Weirton Steel case, involving the collective bargaining provision embodied in section 7-A of the NIRA.

Federal Judge John P. Nields denied an injunction sought by the government to restrain the company from dealing collectively with its employes through the so-called company union and held that the union is adequate under the act.

Judge Nields, however, ruled that Section 7-A is unconstitutional only as it applies to the Weirton firm, which is not engaged in interstate business.

"The enactment of section 7-A either is authorized by the commerce clause of the Constitution or it is unauthorized and void," Judge Nields ruled. "It does not derive from any welfare clause in the Constitution."

In an 85-page opinion, Judge Nields said:

"There is no showing on the part of the plaintiff warranting the court in issuing an injunction.

"Section 7A, as applied to the defendant and its business, is unconstitutional and void.

"By a clear preponderance of

'Framed' in 'Prince Mike' Bed Scene

How the husband burst into the room of "Prince Mike"—Harry Gerguson—and found her in his bed wrapped in a sheet was explained in detail today in New York Supreme Court by Mrs. Wilma Gould. But she testified that previously she had been drugged in order that the "Prince" could "frame" her to aid her husband in a divorce action.

AGREED TO TAKE HELM, SAYS BABE

Due Here Tomorrow

FUCHS FACES MONEY HURDLE; $205,000 DUE APRIL 5

Babe Ruth will be assistant manager of the Braves this year.

He will manage the Braves in 1936 and 1937.

He said so today.

The Big Fellow, packing his grips in New York preparatory to a grand homecoming reception, settled all argument and speculation about the matter with a direct statement. He said:

"It has been definitely decided that I will take full charge of the Braves in the field after one year as an assistant."

"My main ambition still is to manage a big league club and I have accepted the flattering proposition from the Braves with that idea in mind.

"I'm going to Boston under a three-year agreement and expect to sign all the necessary final papers in Boston tomorrow."

Ruth and his wife will entrain for Boston at 1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, due here shortly after 5 o'clock for his first greeting as a home-town hero since 1919, the year that saw the Red Sox relinquish him to the New York Yankees.

He will leave Sunday to join the Braves at St. Petersburg, Florida.

While the 41-year-old slugger was making clear just how attractive a proposition the Boston National League owners had made him, Braves Manager Bill McKechnie's 1936 status was up in the air, with McKechnie insisting he still is "boss" of the team.

The Babe will be, this year, player-vice, president-director on the Braves roster, scheduled to collect some $25,000 or $30,000 annual salary and a percentage of the gate he draws "over and above."

Status of Fuchs

When he displaces McKechnie next year, the latter may become a sort of general manager, or may be ousted.

As to which, much apparently depends upon whether Judge Emil Fuchs is still president of the Braves.

There are new rumblings from the judge's financial difficulties and talk that he will lose the team on April 5 if he cannot raise $205,000 to meet notes due on that date.

The acquisition of the Babe, with all it promises in the way of increased customers for the Allston Wigwam, may be the very means by which Judge Fuchs is enabled to raise the necessary funds.

And so, strangely, the Babe may be the means of saving McKechnie by saving Fuchs.

"Not Worth Nickel"

Whatever the outcome, the dour Scot manager served notice today that he will not share the Braves' management with Ruth. At St. Petersburg McKechnie told Joe Cashman, Boston Evening American correspondent with the team:

"There never was a club big enough for two managers. I'll be absolute boss or nothing. As far as I'm concerned, the Babe is not worth a nickel to the club except as an active performer."

Judge Fuchs, McKechnie's chief backer, has a problem on his hands. No matter how much he may want to retain McKechnie, he wants more to retain the Braves and the Babe means ready cash that he badly needs. Walter Kiley reveals Fuchs has two notes totaling $205,000 to meet on April 5.

While William Harridge, American League president, was regretting in mournful tones the passage of Ruth from the American League, the Babe's original sponsor, Brother Gilbert was assailing the younger league and the Yanks for "firing" the home run hero.

He told Jack Conway:

"When Ruth went to the Yankees, they didn't even have a ball park. They played their games at the Polo Grounds. Due to his great drawing powers the Yankees have built a two million dollar stadium. It has been called the 'Temple of Ruth.'

"The American League should hang its head in shame for the treatment it has accorded to the man who saved it."

Brother Gilbert, former head of St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore, where the Babe was cared for as a boy, is now located in Malden.

He was Ruth's sponsor, and it was he who arranged for the Babe's first professional baseball venture with Jack Dunn's Baltimore Orioles.

MRS. GOULD TELLS OF HUBBY'S 'RAID'

On Her and 'Prince'

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 27—That eventful night she spent in the apartment of "Prince Michael Romanoff," when her husband and others burst into the place and found her lying on a bed, was described by Mrs. Wilma Gould in supreme court today.

"I was drugged," she testified. "I remember nothing until I found myself lying on my left side covered with a sheet in a bed. I was awakened by a terrific noise."

The "terrific noise" was the loud knocking of her husband and his companions, she said, and it prompted the "prince" to dash into the bathroom.

Mrs. Gould charges that it was all a tableau arranged so her husband, Edward Gould, manufacturer, could obtain evidence for divorcing her.

She seeks $560,000 damages from her brother-in-law, former Representative Norman J. Gould, a New York lawyer and a private detective for the alleged "frame-up."

"Prince Mike," who gets his title from his own imagination, and whose real name is Harry Gerguson, entered the courtroom very late—just as Mrs. Gould was telling about the "raid."

Cross-examined by Leon M. Prince, defense attorney, Mrs. Gould said "Prince Mike" virtually swept her off her feet with his attentions, proposing marriage to her on Feb. 2, 1931. He met her but several days before.

Describing what happened the night of February 10, 1931, when the "raid" occurred, the witness said that after she and the "prince" had dined at an East Side speakeasy they took a taxicab to his apartment.

She felt dizzy, Mrs. Gould testified; the street lights blinked, objects assumed fantastiv shapes and proportions.

Swoons in Cab

Mrs. Gould testified that in the cab she lost consciousness.

"Then I found myself lying on my left side covered with a sheet in a bed. I was awakeened by a terrific noise. I started to sit up. Romanoff jumped up and ran into the bathroom."

He was scantily attired, the witness added, and went on:

"Someone was knocking at the door, calling out: 'Open the door at once—you have a woman in there.' "

Mrs. Gould said that one of the men was her husband, and that another of the "raiders" turned to him and asked:

"Is this your wife?"

Her husband replied that she was.

She related that Gerguson at the point emerged from the bathroom filled with indignation.

"What do you mean—disturbing a man in his private apartment?" she quoted him as demanding.

Prince questioned the witness closely about her awakening.

"You found yourself in bed wrapped up in a sheet on your left side?" he queried.

"Yes."

"Were your arms inside or out?"

"I don't recall."

"Were you wound round and round in the sheet?"

"Mummy-like?", asked Mrs. Gould. "I don't recall. I was in a sheet."

Water Pipes Freeze as Dionnes Get Home

By International News Service

Callander, Ont., Feb. 27—Elzire and Oliva Dionee came home today to find a 44-below zero cold wave sweeping the North country and upsetting the routine in their famous quintuplets' hospital by freezing the water pipes.

As a result, water had to be carried to the hospital from a neighboring house to minister to the needs of the five little girls.

Or. Alan R. Dafoe, physician to the quintuplets, called for a thawing machine to start the water system again.

Papa and Mama Dionne were happy but sleepy when they arrived early this morning from the states, and were whisked home in an automobile to see their five elder children, who excitedly awaited them.

But they were not in a talking mood. A burly hired man opened the door.

"No," he said, "Monsier and Madame Dionne are away in Callander.

But little Daaniel Dionne gave away the show. He ran into the bedroom and told mama some one wanted to see her. Neither mama nor papa would appear, however.

During the morning, Elzire and Olivia Dionne hurried over to the hospital to see their famous quintuplets. Emilie was the only one to welcome them. The others slept peacefully.

Once again, it can be proved! The Boston Evening American told you first—and told you right! Here's the American's headline of Friday, October 26, 1934: "BRAVES GET RUTH"! No quibbling about that! But what did the other Boston papers say? Here are their headlines of October 26 and 27: "Ruth to Pilot the Athletics"; "Ruth Offered Job Managing Senators"; "Ruth Rumors Are Spiked"; Deny Ruth to Pilot Braves"! No need of comment. The evidence speaks for itself. The Boston Evening American told you first—and told you right! Even when Ruth's coming to Boston was still a matter of probability rather than of certainty, it was Austen Lake of the Boston Evening American who gave you the "whisper", for what it was worth, on October 9, 1934: "BRAVES SEEK BABE RUTH AS MANAGER." 26 ABOARD Boston Ship FEARED LOST

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 27—Fears that the stricken freighter Blairgowrie, with 26 men aboard, had gone to the bottom of the hurricane-lashed Atlantic increased today as three ships gave up their search for her.

Responding to an SOS call, the Europa and two other vessels, the S.S. American Banker and the S.S. Blommersdyk, steamed through mountainous seas about 1000 miles east of Newfoundland, the position given by the distressed freighter.

No trac of the Blairgowrie was found and the searching ships proceeded toward their destinations

The searchers concluded that the freighter, Boston-bound from Wales, had sunk and that those on board had perished.

MARA Warns NRA of SHOE STRIKE

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 27—Boot and shoe workers have been so throttled and ignored by the code authority and the NRA that the time is nearing "when we've got to tell the manufacturers we're going to strike," John J. Mara of Boston, president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, told the House labor committee today.

He made this statement after Chairman Connery (D.), Massachusetts, asked if labor would be worse off if the NRA and all the codes "were junked," leaving abolition of child labor, abolition of yellow dog contracts, labor's right to organize and collective bargaining in force.

"The shoe code was written by the industry," said Mara, "shoved through by an army officer (Major General Williams, retired), who did not know how to distinguish between a public hearing and a court martial. and then shut tight as a steel drum no matter what the defects.

"The code was written by the industry for the industry with the assistance of the government. As far as labor was listened to it might as well not have been present."

Plan to Rush Millens To Prison Death Cells

house immediately if he can do so under the new law.

The present law provides for moving the men into the death house 10 days before the execution date.

The prison's Cherry Hill, where 115 men are now confined—many of them dangerous characters—is not a sufficiently safe place for Murton and Irving Millen and Abe Faber, prison officials believe.

If, tonight or tomorrow, they reach the death house, a 24-hour guard will be placed over them. Nobody has ever escaped from the death house.

Murton Millen will be given no opportunity in Dedham jail to say farewell to his young wife, Norma, serving a one-year sentence as an accessory to the crimes of Faber.

Norma said today she will file no petition for parole until after the execution.

Now "Sulky"

One of her guards made this announcement today after revealing that Norma has been "sulky" since yesterday.

Norma had filled out her petition for parole several days ago and had intended to file it at once.

The guard said Norma was more dejected today than any time since she entered Dedham jail.

She was tight-lipped on her feelings over her husband's sentence. Her only comment, according to the guard was:

"I won't file my petition for parole until after the execution. It wouldn't do any good until then."

The Millens and Faber were equally silent today. They sulked in their cells and refused to talk to anybody about their sentence.

Last night Murton and Irving Millen just snarled and muttered.

"Let 'em burn us. To h—l with it. Why drag it out?"

And Abe Faber, the "sick man"—and the weak sister—sobbed in his cell, and said:

"I'm too young to die."

When mealtime came the Millens ate. They're used to the jail food now. And they slept, although Death was just around the corner. They were the same defiant, hardboiled pair today who cut down four men in cold blood in their own exclusive crime wave a year ago.

Norma tried to get the Millen counsel, George Stanley Harvey, to take her parole case. He said he couldn't because of his present position.

4 Roads Open

Harvey, and William R. Scharton, counsel for Faber, were trying to decide what one of the number of courses of appeal that they had open would be taken in the case.

Both were agreed that the fight for their clients would go to the United States supreme court.

Harvey had four roads. One was to appeal the refusal of Judge Nelson P. Brown to grant a new trial, setting aside the jury verdict. This would go to the supreme judicial court of Massachusetts, thence to the highest court in the land.

And Harvey could petition the United States circuit court of appeals for a writ of certiorari to take the federal court's refusal of a habeas corpus writ to the U. S. Supreme court.

Or he could go to a supreme court justice and ask a habeas corpus and stay of execution.

For all three men, of course, there was open appeal for clemency to Governor Curley. But no one was banking on that.

Faber's counsel, Attorney Scharton said yesterday that he was petitioning the state Supreme judicial court for a review of exceptions he had taken during the trial.

Losing there, Scharton can carry his appeal to the United States supreme court.

There were few who thought that all these moves would be of much use to the condemned trio, although some were of the opinion that the execution date in April might be delayed.

350 WALK OUT Again in Lynn Row

For the second time in as many days, 350 employed at the Gold Seal Shoe Company in Lynn walked out today, endangering the jobs of 1150 co-workers.

The strikers are seeking a written agreement with the owners that if their Haverhill factory is reopened, the wage-scale will match the Lynn pay-scale.

TIPSY DRIVER Ires Judge in Court

Dennis Byrne, 44, of Tucker avenue, Lexington, walked to the prisoner's bar in East Cambridge district court today and pleaded guilty to driving an automobile under the influence of liquor.

Judge Louis L. Green looked at Byrne in surprise as he swayed to and fro.

The judge ordered Byrne placed in the prisoner's dock and after an examination, he was sentenced to five days for contempt of court.

When he gets out, he will have the first charge to answer.

SHOTS HALT Youth in Chase

Several shots were fired today in a two-mile chase in which one man was captured in South Boston.

Patrolman William R. Black finally caught up and arrested one youth who was booked as a suspicious person while they sought his companion in connection with a break in an East Fifth street shoe repair shop owned by John Nildbridian.

'NRA Is Dead'

Under the caption of "The Future of NRA" the Chicago Tribune of February 25 published this editorial:

The President has asked Congress to give the National Recovery Administration another two years of life but, contrary to his usual practice, he has had no bill prepared incorporating his ideas.

Politically, the problem of what to do with NRA is a difficult one. The NRA failed to produce recovery; but to let NRA die would be to advertise the fact. Candidates for office try to avoid calling attention to their mistakes.

How Congress will carry out the recommendation remains to be seen, but meanwhile it can be said with considerable assurance that regardless of what Congress does, NRA is dead. Nothing so heartening has happened in the last two years. The collapse of NRA is the collapse of as vicious a tyranny over its citizens as our government has ever sought to impose. The scheme fell to pieces and ten thousand pay rollers couldn't save it.

The outcome was certain from the moment NRA tasted defeat in its campaign to license and censor the press. The great majority of editors and publishers of all shades of opinion were found united in defense of the Constitutional guaranty of a free press. They carried the day. So long as the press remains unmuzzled, the Recovery Administration knows that all its crackings-down must be exposed to public view.

Arbitrary, unfair and unreasonable restrictions on output and prices which were incorporated in many of the codes would be maintained only by star chamber proceedings and the use of force. These devices might subdue Russians, Germans, and Italians, but Americans have shown that they will not tolerate them.

The Administration did venture to prosecute a few humble victims like Fred Perkins, the battery manufacturer of York, Pa., but Mr. Perkins had not been in jail many days before he was no longer an obscure citizen.

The whole world has learned that he had been tried by a code authority consisting of his competitors and that he had never been given the name of the person who complained against him. The storm of protest that arose in his behalf was too powerful for the government to face again.

In consequence, tens of thousands of complaints of alleged code violations are said to be on file in Washington, but the government is afraid to prosecute them. Without prosecution there is no NRA.

One way to make men do what their common sense tells them not to do is bribery. That is the way of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Another way is the application of brute force. That is the way of the NRA, and it has failed because the American people will not stand for it. The government dares not apply it.

In a time of doubt and hesitation, the collapse of NRA is something to ponder upon. It proves that the spirit and habit of liberty are still strong in this country. Bunker Hill remains our highest peak.

'PINK SLIP' LAW REPEAL DEMANDED

INCOME TAX SNOOPERS HIT

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 27—Repeal of the publicity section of the income tax law was demanded in the House to remove the "stigma of dishonesty" it casts on the taxpayers.

The country resents this stigma, caused by Congress "in a fit of hysteria," Representative Millard (R) of New York charged.

Meanwhile, in New York Representative Bacon (R) of that state, author of the resolution to repeal the requirement income tax payers must reveal their earnings and taxes to the public through "pink slips," declared:

"These pink slips are government writs of assistance for snoopers."

Chairman Doughton of the House ways and means committee said he had received no word of the Treasury Department's attitude for the proposal to repeal the publicity requirement.

Thousands of letters and telegrams from all over the country are pouring into the members' offices denouncing the "pink slips" to be required when income taxes are due March 15.

Millard pointed out revelation of earnings of all taxpayers wil make them prey to blackmailers, kidnapers and swindlers.

Chamber Heads Hit "Pink Slip" Law

New York, Feb. 27 (US)—Louis C. Wills, president of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, today stated that the Kings county organization is calling a meeting Thursday at which resolutions will be adopted about the publication of income tax returns. Mr. Willis, commenting on the pink slip law, said:

"Congress should take immediate steps to rescind the action of the previous session, which places taxpayers at the mercy of unscrupulous and unprincipled elements."

Richard W. Lawrence, chairman of the taxation committee, Chamber of Commerce of the state of New York, in denouncing the publication of income tax returns, said:

"The pink slip offers a rare opportunity for evil to every type of swindler and criminal."

SECRETS In 'WifeSwap' GUARDED

HEARING TODAY TO BE PRIVATE

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 27—Possibility of another hearing behind closed doors was seen today as new sensations loomed in the embattled Emerson-Sewell marital muddle.

Judge Ben Lindsey, noted marital authority, held a private session yesterday when one part of the testimony reached a point which demanded privacy.

The same procedure may be taken today as new chapters in the tangled love affairs of the four principals are unfolded.

The four are Walter Emerson, actor-writer, who is suing his wife for divorce, naming Barton Sewell, sportsman, as co-respondent; Mrs. Jane Scholtz Emerson, who is suing Emerson for alimony and custody of their three children, naming Mrs. Sewell as co-respondent; Mrs. Sewell, who is suing Mrs. Emerson for $100,000 for alienation of her husband's affections.

Mrs. Blanche Sholtz, mother of Mrs. Emerson, yesterday was asked to repeat an alleged telephone conversation she had several months ago with her son-in-law.

At this point Judge Lindsey ordered the testimony recited in his private chambers.

The names of Olive Borden, screen actress; Edna Wallace Hopper, actress and beauty culture expert, and Gertrude Vanderbilt, stage actress, were brought into the case yesterday when Burt McMurtrie, friend of Emerson, took the stand.

He said Emerson visited him in New York last June and that the actor "went out" with the three women during his stay.

HUGE WAR

Profits Made by BETHLEHEM

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 27—Profits of $68,000,000, reaped by Bethlehem Ship Building Corporation and its subsidiaries during the war period, were listed today by Senate munitions committee exhibits.

The profit was shown in these documents to range from 20 per cent to 57 per cent of invested capital in the plants.

But these figures brought an immediate protest from S. W. Wakeman, vice-president of the corporation, that the percentage of profits shown was "unfair."

"When you talk of percentage of earnings," F. A. Shick, comptroller, interjected, "you are not including $32,000,000 of capital put in by the government."

He declared the government built several plants used by the company.

"The government put them up and let us use them in return for the benefit of our 'know-how,'" Shick said.

"As far as return to the stockholders was concerned," Stephen Raushenbush, committee counsel, said, "this is the amount they received on what capital they put in."

"That is true," Shick agreed.

MELLON SOLD, Son Bought, Bonds

Pittsburgh, Feb. 27 (INS)—Andrew W. Mellon sold $350,000 in bonds in 1933 and, on the same day, companies owned by his daughter and son bought the identical bonds through the same agents, Howard M. Johnson, confidential secretary to the financier admitted before the U. S. board of tax appeals here today.

This disclosure came during a general discussion of transactions in the tax battle in which the government seeks $3,089,261 in additional taxes and penalties on Mellon's 1931 income. The financier asks a refund of $139,045.

New Fish Puzzler

Has Head Like Shark With Tail of a Rat

Do you know a good name for a fish?

If you do, rush down to the United States Bureau of Fisheries where there is much difficulty in trying to name one that was brought in here today by the steam trawler Thomas Whalen.

As an aid to naming the thing here is its description:

It is three feet long and weighs about five pounds. It has a head like a shark with its mouth underneath.

It is equipped with uppers and lowers of fine, sharp teeth. But there the shark characteristics stop and the fish comes in.

Although it has spikes instead of fins, it has nice chocolate brown scales. And from there, its body tapers off into a rat-like tail.

REDS Blamed for STRIKE

BY WEST COAST SHIP OWNERS

By Universal Service

Washington, Feb. 27—Charges that the longshoremen's strike on the West Coast last year grew from plans laid a year earlier by agents from Moscow were placed before the House committee on un-American activities.

Spokesmen of the American Pacific Steamship Owners Association, baring the plot which they maintain was conceived and executed by Communists, are seeking congressional aid to check the plan before it can be carried to full fruition.

The Communist leaders, they told the committee, are centering their efforts upon making California the first state in the United States to be industrially controlled by Russian agents.

The next step in this red plot, steamship owners declare, will be the establishment of a general West Coast labor conference, embracing workers in every field of transportation. Already plans for the formation of the conference are well under-way, they have been informed.

Backed by a network covering shipping lines, motor fleets and other agencies, the organization will dominate the industrial life of the entire Pacific Coast, the ship owners warned the committee.

Not only have the red agents organized their own unions, but they have obtained charters from the American Federation of Labor, despite vigorous protests by the the shipping interests, testimony before the committee charges.

By International News Service

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 27—The Senate today advanced to the order of final passage the Nunan bill requiring students entering colleges and normal schools supported wholly or in part by public funds to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution.

Senator Joseph D. Nunan, author of the bill, said the oath will be required of students from foreign countries, but that those entering private colleges like Cornell and Vassar will not be required to take the oath.

FIREBUGS

Set Chelsea $6000 BLAZE

Firebugs, police said, set a six-family wooden dwelling house afire in Tremont street, Chelsea, and for more than two hours firemen waged a desperate battle to halt the flames.

Because the entire district, a congested tenement section, was jeopardized, two alarms were sounded, and a score of families made ready to flee. The burning house itself was unoccupied.

Fire apparently started in the basement and had worked its way well up through the center of the house before police in a prowl car discovered it.

Although the building was condemned by the Chelsea building inspectors some time ago, according to police, damage was set at $6000.

Mrs. Stella Sczyncak, 36, who lives at Beacon and Tremont streets, saw the flames. Thinking they came from the house next door to the burning structure, she ran to the street in her bare feet to arouse her friend, Mrs. Edward Atick, who lives there.

MOTHER OF 2 Fined in Lottery

Brother and sister, the latter mother of two children, were found guilty in Quincy Court today on charges of setting up a number lottery in their home in Estabrook road, Wollaston.

Louise Tiberian was fined $300 and sentenced to three months in jail. Mrs. Jennie Shulman, 32, wife of Henry Shulman, treasurer of the Granite Finance Co., was fined $300. Both appealed.

Michael Sansone, 38, who was called as a government witness, was arrested after the hearing on a charge of setting up a lottery. His case was continued.

No Lindy Ransom Here, U. S. Agents Announce

Boston officials of the Treasury Department announced today that no Lindbergh kidnaping ransom bills had been found in this district either before or after the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The federal agents still are interested in tracing such bills, if any turn up, although the kidnaping itself has been "settled" for them by Hauptmann's conviction, they declared.

A similar statement was issued by the Department of Justice at Washington, where all knowledge of appearance of ransom bills in the Boston area was disclaimed.

At Trenton, N. J., Major Charles H. Schoeffel, deputy superintendent of the state police, said today that organization "knows nothing" about Lindbergh ransom money reported to have been found here.

Four Bruno Witnesses Face Perjury Indictment

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27—Indictments for perjury will be sought against three men and a woman who testified for the defense in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, it was reported today.

The Hunterdon County grand jury, scheduled to convene on March 10, will be asked to indict the four on perjury charges, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck announced upon his return from Miami, where he conferred with Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

In the meantime, state officials said Hauptmann's appeal to the higher court will be hastened "so that he may be executed before summer."

Bruno Not Downhearted, Prays in Death Cell

By Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 27—Bruno Hauptmann has turned to spiritual consolation as he waits in the Jersey State Prison death house for developments on his appeal from a death sentence.

His wife, Anna Hauptmann, after a visit to his cell with the Rev. D. C. Werner of New York, declared:

"He's not downhearted—how could he be, when he's innocent."

The minister said Hauptmann prayed daily and accepted spiritual advice.

He brought the prisoner a German book, "Steps to Christ," and affirmed, too, that the prisoner was in apparently good spirits.

BRIDE 'Waits' for BUDDY

HE FLEES, TOO, AFTER TIFF

Love used to laugh at locksmiths.

Today it grinned at radio schedules.

All of which means that a 19-year-old crooner's bride of six days can rule the waves—certain air waves.

Mrs. Buddy Clark, who gave up private school to marry the Boston crooner only last week, was the center of the happenings.

It seems that she would rather have her husband sing in New York. But Buddy, who is Samuel Goldberg in real life, pleaded that he had Boston air contracts to fill.

In the first few rounds of their parley, the question was far from settled. Forthwith, the bride did what many brides threaten to do at various times. She left in a pout.

Buddy Gone, Too

The former Louise Dahl Clark set up husbandless quarters in a New York hotel. It was, incidentally, a hotel of a chain other than that of which her uncle and foster-father, Ralph Hitz, is president.

All was impasse until shortly before 7 a. m. today.

Buddy checked out of his wifeless honeymoon suite here—bag and baggage. He left no word about his destination.

Came 10 o'clock. The radio public was due to hear him croon over a local station. A tenor was rushed to the studio to take his place. Buddy had vanished.

"Where is Buddy?" his sponsors were queried.

"That's what we'd like to know," came the sad admission.

In her New York hotel, pretty Louise was harassed by reporters. She fairly leaped every time the telephone rang.

"Why don't you call him up?" ventured one.

"Me call him. Never! He'll have to come to me."

ANNIE PECK Still Climb Champion

New York, Feb. 27 (INS)—Miss Annie S. Peck, 84-year-old ex-mountain climber, still holds firm her position as "mountain-climberess No. 1 of the world," a check-up of the record revealed today.

Reports from Argentina yesterday had Mrs. Wiley Lance claiming the title as a result of her climb of 20,922 feet in an attempt to scale Mt. Aconcagua, in the Andes.

On September 2, 1908, Miss Peck reached the peak of Mt. Huascaran, in Peru, a height of 21,812 feet.

Washington, Feb. 27 (AP)—Full confidence that the Filipinos are able and prepared to govern themselves was expressed here today by Governor General Frank Murphy on his arrival in response to a presidential summons to report on conditions in the Philippines.

Police Try 2-Way Radio

McSweeney at "Mike" in Prowl Car Test

The first Boston police car equipped with two-way radio rolled through the streets today.

At the instruments was Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney.

His first call went to the press room at police headquarters.

"We're driving down Massachusetts avenue, in the South End," he said.

His voice was as clear as though it were coming in over a telephone.

Then he called his home, and then the State House.

There he spoke to Richard Grant, secretary to the Governor, and to Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley.

"This is still experimental," he told Hurley.

"The police department should be congratulated on this achievement," declared Hurley.

To the Boston Evening American the police commissioner gave credit for its long fight for adequate police radio facilities.

RACING

Board Defies HOWL ON DOGS

In the face of mounting protests, the new racing commission stood defiant today against demands that dog racing licenses be revoked.

The commission met this morning but made no ruling either for or against protests on licenses granted for Cambridge, South Boston, Methuen and Dighton tracks.

They conferred with a group from the Crescent Kennel Club of West Springfield, which seeks a dog license in that city.

The commission also "marked time" on an application for dog racing at Boston Garden.

Meanwhile, Corporation Counsel Henry E. Foley studied racing laws at the order of Mayor Mansfield.

The mayor indicated that the protest of the South Boston site will eventually reach Supreme Court for a decision on the city's right to withhold approval of race sites under an 1856 law.

Cambridge protestants, including Senator Charles T. Cavanagh, clergymen and civic leaders, rested their protests with Governor Curley, who will return late this week from Washington.

Action in the governor's council to force public hearings on licenses was indicated today in several moves of Councillor Frank A. Brooks of Watertown.

RADICAL TEACHERS FAIL IN REVOLT

Leaders Flay Reds

STAND TAKEN BY STUDEBAKER IS ECHOED BY MAJORITY

By Universal Service

Atlantic City, Feb. 27—"Academic freedom should be the freedom of the learner to learn and not the freedom of the professor to profess."

John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of education, summed up in these words the views of a large majority of the educational leaders of the country in convention here.

The expressed demand of radical teachers that they be allowed to turn the classrooms of the country into political forums for the spread of theoretical "isms," met with sturdy resistance. A threatened revolt in the left-wingers failed to materialize.

Backs Studebaker

Backing the stand taken by Studebaker, who presided at a general meeting of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association, Frederick S. Beibler, professor of economics, Northwestern University, said:

"Let us not scrap the experience of the past to embark on the experiment of revolution."

Worth McClure, superintendent of schools of Seattle, Wash., urging that education must function for individual growth through existing social agencies, warned educators to beware of "government patterns borrowed from overseas."

Scoff at Claims

Openly scoffing at the pretensions of those who profess to know what the future holds in store, Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools of Washington, D. C., and formerly of Boston, said:

"The one function of education is to help children know and understand social change. When the American people have decided what kind of a social order they want, the schools will be ready to teach it. We would not try to teach the children what to think but how to think."

W. W. Theisen, assistant superintendent of schools at Milwaukee, joined Ballou in his attack on radical teachers. He asked how these teachers could be so sure of their ground when economists, social science students and philosophers were unable to agree. He said:

"After all, it is rather naive to place such confidence in these teachers. If, however, there are those who do believe in transplanting the present social order, let them be honest about it. Any other course is rank dishonesty."

New Year Book

Views of the educators featured the discussion of the annual yearbook, prepared by a commission of 12, headed by Studebaker. The year-book was two years in preparation.

The stand for liberalism or radicalism in the schools was upheld by only two members of the commission—John L. Childs and Jesse H. Newlon, both from Teachers College, New York.

Both Childs and Newlon defended the right of teachers to indoctrinate their pupils. Each was subjected to heckling from other members of the commission in a jury-panel discussion.

Changed Methods

Discussing the change of methods in teaching, before the American Educational Research Association, Frederick S. Breed, of the University of Chicago said:

"To the degree that our teachings are known to be true, to that degree indoctrination is manifestly justified."

Warning that the scientific educator should exercise great discrimination in the subject matter he is teaching, Breed added:

"In the field of social science he will deny the right of any instructor to teach the superiority of Communism, Fascism, Capitalism, or Socialism until that superiority has been more certainly established."

Alleged Slayer Wants Wife "Kept Out"

EDMUND J. WALSH

ISAIAH L. McLAIN

MRS. ALICE CROSBY WALSH

When Edmund J. Walsh of Stoneham goes on trial Tuesday, charged with the murder of Patrolman Isaiah L. "Pete" McLain of the Malden police, Mrs. Alice Crosby Walsh, young wife of the accused man, will be present in court, if defense counsel William R. Scharton has his way. But, even with his life at stake, Walsh himself is reported obdurate in his demand, "Keep my wife out of this!" (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Wife May Aid Walsh

Faces Trial as Police Slayer

Mrs. Edmund J. Walsh, young wife of the man accused of slaying Patrolman Isaiah L. "Pete" McLain of the Malden police force, may be in Middlesex Superior Court Tuesday when her husband starts his battle for life.

His attorney, William R. Scharton, wrote her today asking that she be present.

The only thing that may keep her away is the accused man, himself. Since his arrest last November, he has insisted again and again:

"Keep my wife and children out of this."

His wife, Mrs. Alice Crosby Walsh, graduate of Stoneham high school, has been a regular visitor to see him in jail. She is the mother of his two children.

Walsh is charged with killing McLain when the latter tried to arrest him after an insurance man pointed Walsh out as the man who had robbed him.

R. H. HEMPHILL SAYS

International Meddlers Holding Conference

By ROBERT H. HEMPHILL
Financial Authority

The Carnegie institution for international meddling, masquerading under the misleading title of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and Professor Nicholas Murray Butler, its president, are gathering together, in London, the "disinterested" economic representatives of the Rothschilds, the international oil companies, and the Anglo-American international money changers, ostensibly to work out a program of monetary stabilization (whatever they may conceive that to mean), free trade, and to promote a peaceful "family of nations."

The main idea appears to be, by adroit intimation, that the United States, having demonstrated its complete incompetence to handle simple recovery problems, should now sponsor a movement to lead more fortunate nations, to whom the depression is largely a matter of history, back into the morass from which our Brain Trust government appears to be inextricably entangled.

This so-called conference will undoubtedly advocate American participation in the League of Nations and the League Court and a return to the almost universally discredited gold standard, likely on the ancient basis of $20.67 per ounce.

They will also likely advocate other measures for drastic deflation.

Just why they should inflict this burlesque performance on London, which is busy with its rapidly expanding commercial affairs, is not clear.

The real humor in the situation, however, is in the reported statement of Professor Butler that the meeting will be secret, but that the results of the deliberations "may be given to the world for its GUIDANCE."

If there is any more privacy about these meetings than the proverbial goldfish bowl, it will not be the fault of the skillful Nicholas Murray Butler.

It will be because a usually wary daily press, which at that is often enough taken for a ride, will appraise this unimportant, presumptious effort for just what it is—a strictly private device for incubating League Court propaganda, with the UTMOST PUBLICITY as almost its sole OBJECTIVE.

CURLEY Prison Plan PRAISED

LYMAN, ELIOT BACK BILLS

Governor Curley's inaugural message recommendations for prison reform were endorsed, today, by State Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman and other leading citizens.

Three bills on the governor's prison plans were heard. They provide for:

Adequate facilities to house and maintain juvenile and first offenders separately from hardened criminals.

Charlestown State Prison to be abandoned, the buildings razed and the site utilized as a receiving station for hardened criminals.

Suitable prison quarters at Norfolk for persons convicted of felonies.

Commissioner Lyman expressed himself in thorough accord with the Governor's recommendations which he said made for "an ideal program." Lyman added:

"The first recommendation is the most important and pressing and should be met first."

He outlined a program for a $740,000 receiving building to house 300 inmates; a $1,000,000 rehabilitation building for young and first offenders to house 500; an $800,000 maximum security building to house 400, and a $[illegible]00,000 criminal insane building to house 500.

Either 25 acres of the 329 at Concord or 25 of the 1000 at Norfolk could be used for the young and first offender building.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel A. Eliot, minister of Arlington Street Church; Stephen C. Cabot, representing the Massachusetts Civic League and Judge Baker Guidance Committee, and James H. Sheldon, representing the League of Independent Political Action, also spoke in favor of the governor's program.

ALDERMAN

Guilty in Job Bribe

Brockton, Feb. 27—Alderman Samuel Shapira pleaded guilty here today to accepting gratuities from a man who wanted a job in the fire department and from a policeman who wanted to become a sergeant.

In each case, it was charged, Shapira accepted $100.

Judge Frank J. Donahue postponed action until June when Assistant District Attorney Ovide V. Fortier declared his office was investigating reports that Shapira had to "split" the money with another alderman.

7-A Clause Of NRA Act Ruled Void

evidence, this court finds that the plan of employe representation in effect among the employes of the defendant affords a lawful and effective organization of the employes for collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing.

"In all respects it complied with the provisions of Section 7A of the National Industrial Recovery Act act and Section 1, Article 4, of the steel code.

"In all respects it is directly operated and controlled by defendant's employes and is not dominated or controlled by defendant or its agents."

20th Century Rule

The decision struck at the government's right, depression or not, to interfere in a business which cannot be classified as interstate as follows:

"The manufacturing operations conducted by the defendant in its various plants or mills do not constitute interstate commerce.

"The manufacturer is a co-operative enterprise. Production depends upon a sympathetic co-operation of management and workmen.

"It is said this relation involves the economic problem of the balance of power of labor against the power of capital. The theory of a balance of power, or of balancing opposing powers, is based upon the assumption of an inevitable and necessary diversity of interest.

"This is the traditional Old-World feeling. It is not the Twentieth Century American theory of that relation as dependent upon mutual interests, understanding and good will.

"This modern theory is embodied in the Weirton plan of employment organization.

"Furthermore, the esuggestion that hard times suspend constitutional limitations or cause manufacturing operations to so affect interstate commerce as to subject them to regulation by Congress borders on the fantastic and merits no serious consideration."

The government's suit charged that through the "imposition" of a company union the company circumvented the collective bargaining rights of the steel workers.

THEATERS

'Need Newspaper ADVERTISING'

By International News Service

New Orleans, Feb. 27—S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, Inc., called upon the American motion picture theatre owners today to recognize the importance of newspaper advertising as an essential part of theatrical recovery.

"It is an axiom that advertising is the life-blood of the newspaper," Einfeld told the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"It is just as true that it is the life-blood of the theater. And until exhibitors realize this, Old Man Depression will still hang around."

Emphasizing that newspaper advertising is the medium of widest appeal, Einfeld added:

"By far the largest part of the advertising budget of every motion picture company is spent upon newspaper advertising, and that condition is going to continue.

"It is not going to be affected by radio, television or any other modern medium. We cannot do without the press."

WALKER
AS ALIEN

HIS CREDITORS 'FORCE' STEP

By Associated Press

London, Feb. 27—While James J. Walker indicated his intention today of complying at once with the requirement that aliens shall register, friends of the former New York mayor expressed the opinion his creditors were attempting to embarrass him.

The question of Walker's failure to register, it was pointed out, was raised in court by the attorney for one of the creditor firms.

Legal experts, however, said it appeared doubtful the creditors would reap any advantage from an attempt to force Walker to return t othe United States. The New Yorker has until April 24 to register, it was explained.

Home office officials indicated they were unlikely to take any action against Walker, but one official said he wondered "why he doesn't come to see us about it."

Th former mayor said he intended to attend to the formality "immediately."

RELIEF
Wage Pact
SEEN

AFTER RETURN OF PRESIDENT

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 27—Efforts to work out a compromise of the wage controversy in the administration's $4,880,000,000 relief bill were believed to be under way in earnest today as Senator Wagner (D., N.Y.) conferred with several senators favoring the McCarran amendment, which President Roosevelt opposes.

Wagner, who voted for the prevailing wage along with 20 other Democrats, 21 Republicans, one Progressive and one Farmer-Laborite, was understood to be taking the lead in maneuvering for a compromise acceptable to the administration.

Meanwhile, administration leaders withheld all comment on the troubled relief situation pending the arrival tomorrow of President Roosevelt from Hyde Park. Chairman Glass (D., Va.) has made no move to call the appropriations committee, to which the bill was returned last week.

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), author of the wage amendment, entered Wagner's office in the Senate Office Building with a statement he would accept a compromise only if it retained the "spirit" of his amendment.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Feb. 27—President Roosevelt turned toward the capital today silent but apparently confident about the legislative conflict in the Senate.

He broke his home stay today to receive newspapermen for the regular semi-weekly interview before taking a drive to a section of the estate where new trees are to be planted in furtherance of his forestry experimentation.

In response to questions about the administration legislative program Mr. Roosevelt simply replied that he had not been in communication with congressional leaders.

ATTACK

LABOR TURNS ON PRESIDENT

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

Washington, Feb. 27—President Roosevelt, in the dramatic battle on the 4880 million dollars' public works bill, is being attacked by the interests he has served best.

The assault upon him is being waged by the American Federation of Labor through a group of liberal Republicans and Democrats, largely from the West.

They have been joined by some conservative Republicans less interested in the wages than in raising it as a political issue.

Organized labor has undergone some interesting changes in its relationship to the government.

For years, through Republican regimes, they were minority critics here. They invariably lamented that this was a government of Wall Street, without sympathy for the workers.

Samuel Gompers, during his long regime, insisted that labor should stand defiantly apart from government; because in any partnership it would be certain to be stripped of its influence.

With the advent of Roosevelt as President, organized labor broke from its independence preached by Gompers.

President Roosevelt pleaded the cause of the forgotten man, the worker and the farmer. He insisted that the excessive wealth of the rich should be distributed among the less fortunate.

He promulgated the NRA in the hope it would make employment widespread. He executed AAA in the hope of increasing the farmers' income.

He organized the vastest program of public works in history that employment might be afforded the out-of-work.

Organized labor participated in all these campaigns and assumed much glory.

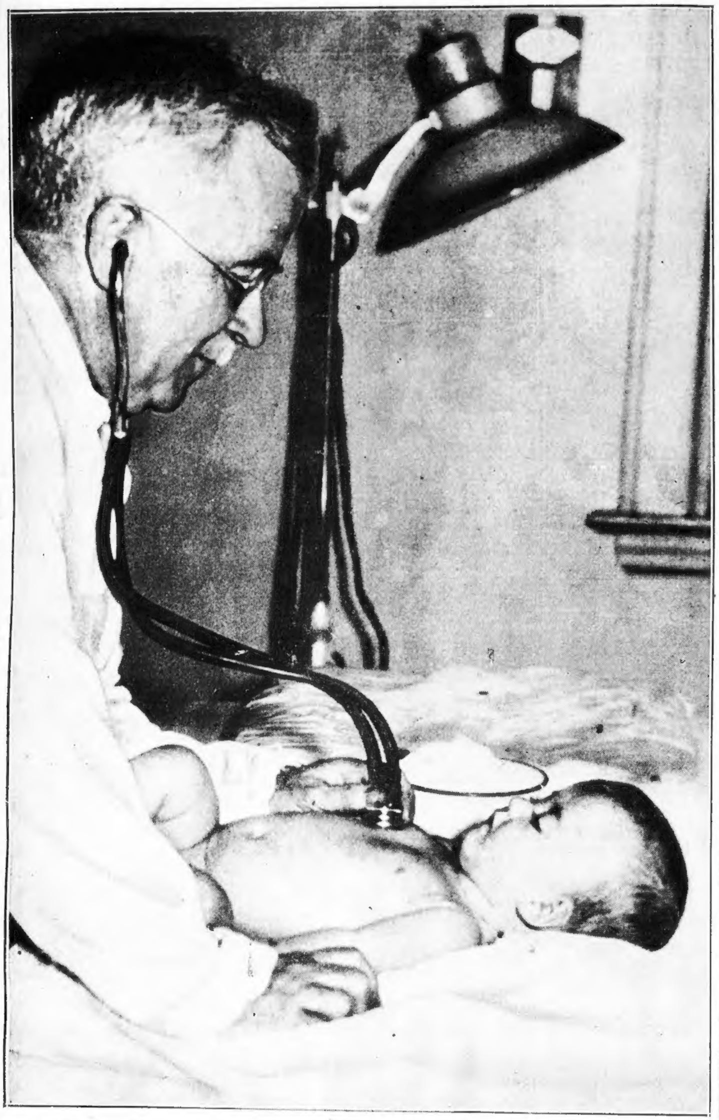
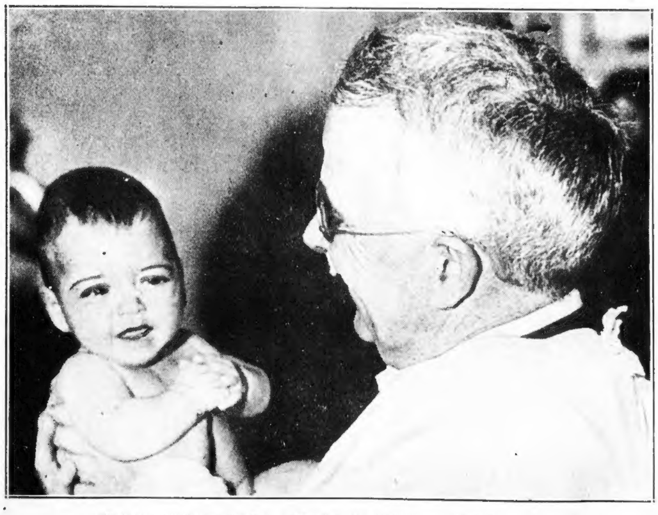
LIFE'S ONE DARNED THING, THEN ANOTHER, "QUINTS" FIND



NO SECRETS—"Quint" Annette Dionne hasn't so much as a heart beat to conceal from her good friend, Dr. Allan R. Dafoe. She looks up at him with perfect confidence as he makes the stethescopic examination which is a part of the daily health routine of all five quintuplets. No least thing can go unobserved with any one of his tiny charges. Their weight, their diet, their digestion are checked minutely and unfailingly.

"WELL, FOR GOODNESS' SAKE!"—"Quint" Marie Dionne never noticed it before, but, come to think, there's something sort of funny about the face of her old pal, Doc Dafoe! It's probably his glasses, which make him look as if he had four eyes instead of two. That's a brand new notion from Marie's point of view. She really doesn't know what to make of it. In a world already full ofextraordinary things, this latest wonder still has power to widen her eyes in amazement.



WHAT'S this? If it isn't one thing it's another! No sooner does Marie Dionne solve the mystery of Doc Dafoe's glasses to her own satisfaction, than, flash, off goes a cameraman's flood-light bulb. Picture at right.

←

BOO-HOO—It can't be a pin—and it can't be Dr. Dafoe's tender, skillful handling! So it must be sheer embarrassment which is causing "Quint" Yvonne Dionne (at left) to screw her little face up in what's going to be a real, aggrieved "Boo-hoo."

Skating Carnival Will Be Gala Event

By BETTY ALDEN

THE GRACEFUL ART of skating has come to be one of tried and true enthusiasms of society since Jack Frost has found Boston and its environs such a pleasant place to settle for the winter . . . Many lovers of the out-of-doors have never enjoyed such perfect skating conditions as have existed here this winter, and now that they have taken a serious interest in the art themselves the results of skating competitions of the stars of the ice have become of vital interest to them . . .

MARIBEL VINSON

There is greater chatter among the enthusiasts about the laurels which Bostonians brought back from the North American Championships in Montreal last week-end . . . A special car on the Red Wing, which left here last Wednesday and returned on Monday morning, was filled with society's expert skaters who competed in the championships and enjoyed the hospitality of the Winter Club in Montreal during their visit there . . .

• • •

Won Championship

FOR THE FIRST TIME in years an American pair captured the pairs championship award, with Maribel Vinson and George E. B. Hill skating away to victory over Mrs. Constance Samuels and Montgomery (Bud) Wilson of Toronto . . .

Polly Blodgett, Boston's diminutive skater who has thrilled many large audiences here with her miraculous turns and spirals, placed sixth in the pairs with her partner, Roger F. Turner, and the Madden family distinguished themselves by placing near the top in every class in which they were entered . . .

Among the festivities which were given for their entertainment in Montreal were a skaters' luncheon on Thursday, a tea on Friday, followed by a supper dance after the competitive classes on Friday evening . . .

The next large event to please the skating devotees will be the mammoth carnival which the Boston Skating Club is planning for March 22 and 23 at the Arena . . .

"World Fair" is the title of the pageant which will unfold on the ice as some of the world's greatest ice stars, and all of Boston's experts in the graceful art, in gay costumes, dramatize the parts in a huge, colorful spectacle . . .

Youthful Maxie Herver, the 14-year-old German champion, considered by many authorities to be the greatest free skater in the world, will give an exhibition performance, and Sweden is sending its prima donna of the ice, Vivi-Ann Hulten, to thrill the Boston audience with her skill . . .

Great mystery surrounds the specific plans being made for this exciting event, but Sue Davis, Mrs. Charles B. Blanchard, Mrs. D. Codman Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Rotch and Molly Frothingham promise that early next week they will be ready to announce the results of their efforts to arrange the spectacular numbers on the program . . .

Guests at the White House

WHEN PRESIDENT AND MRS. ROOSEVELT entertained at a state dinner the other evening in honor of the nation's dignitaries, their guests included Dr. and Mrs. Endicott Peabody of Groton where Dr. Peabody is headmaster of the school which the President attended in his youth . . . As the Peabodys are staunch New England Republicans, some interesting political discussions must develop when he spends a social evening with his famous ex-pupil . . .

Hardly a day passes that we fail to hear tidings of interesting ventures of society women into the work-a-day world . . . One of the most recent concerns a former Boston belle, Mrs. George Parkinson (Betty Thorndike) who has been prominent in Vincent Club and Junior League circles here since her debut.

With her friend, Mrs. John Henry Iselin, Jr., she has developed an original idea and they have recently hung out a shingle as originators and queens of a maternity department in a Fifth avenue shop . . .

Young social minded mothers and most of Gotham's blue-blooded babies are dressed by these enterprising young women, who, so far, have had the tenacity to withstand the strains of hard work which sometimes overtake society women in business.

Mrs. Parkinson is the daughter of Mrs. Walter Atherton, one of Boston's most charming matrons, and of the late Alden A. Thorndike . . .

Royal Honeymooners Entertained

NEW YORK SOCIETY is having so much fun entertaining visiting royal honeymooners that we wish some fashionable couples from the Old World would come to Boston to add zest and excitement to the rather dull social program of the late winter . . .

The charming personality and exquisite jewels (which she displays with great pride) of the former Infanta Beatriz, has been the dominant subject of discussion over social tea cups in Gotham during the stay of the newly-weds there . . . the Don and Donna Torlonia are occupying a modest apartment in New York for their honeymoon but will soon be off to Italy where they plan to make their home . . .

After the departure of this royal couple, hostesses will begin to plan parties for the early spring visit of Sir Michael Duff and the bride he will wed at a very grand London wedding on March 5 . . . The bride-to-be is Lady Joan Marjoriebanks, daughter of Lord Tweedmouth . . .

JEALOUSY AND LOVE

FORGET IF YOU CAN—By John Erskine (Bobbs, Merrill.)

For novels jealousy is as old a theme as love. And on no storyteller's problem have the spiders spun more cobwebs than on the question:

"When two love can they suddenly forget their pasts?"

Yet if anyone can bring the sparkle of new life to these things, it is John Erskine, the insouciant author of "Helen of Troy" and "Gallahad."

In this novel he deals with a mature love affair.

Erskine insists that it is a true story about real people.

THE ILIAD—Translated into blank verse by Sir William Harris (Oxford University Press).

Proof positive that Homer's story of fighting men is a good one is the fact that it has been a "best seller" more than 2000 years.

That's why new translations are still profitable. There are those, of course, who say that they are impossible. You can't translate Homer's Greek into modern English verse, they argue.

If they still feel that way after reading this version, we will leave them to their hair-splitting. Sir William's blank verse does have the martial swing of the original. And it is as easy to read as it must have been easy to listen to the blind poet.

Recent Books I Have Liked

To learn just what Boston is reading, a half dozen persons, selected at random, were asked what book they enjoyed most during the last few weeks. The answers:

MISS MARY WARD, commissioner of immigration: Willa Cather's "Death Comes for the Archbishop" (Knopf).

ALBERT LYND, Harvard faculty: "The Primrose Path," Ogden Nash (Simon and Schuster).

EDWARD P. BARRY, former lieutenant-governor: "10,000 Public Enemies," Cooper (Little, Brown).

FRANCIS J. W. FORD, United States attorney: "Recollections of Seventy Years," Cardinal O'Connell (Little, Brown).

DOROTHY TOBIN, Dorchester: "Forty Days of Musa Dagh," Franz Werfel (Viking).

More of Boston's literary likes will appear in this column next Wednesday.

CONTRIBUTION TO HISTORY

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN

THE HISTORY OF "THE TIMES" —1785-1841—(Macmillan).

As anonymous as the newspaper that it describes is this history, issued to commemorate the 150th anniversary of The London Times—a journal that may well be called the first modern paper.

But lack of a signature—a "by line" to the newspaperman—does not mean this book is a dull and self-laudatory affair. When the other two volumes are off the presses, the work may well stand forth as one of the most important, recent contributions to British history.

To a newspaperman, the history of "The Thunderer" is of course, required reading, but the layman will find it a thrilling story and an amazing glimpse behind the publishing scene.

Love Denied

Stuart Gets Surprise

CHAPTER 39

Stuart kept his back turned determinedly, but of course he could not help hearing every word of this tender passage.

He was embarrassed at his predicament and hoped fervently that they would leave without discovering him, as they were blocking his only exit.

"Kent, you must look at Stuart's picture before we go. It's a beautiful thing!"

"The big one over there?" Following her glance he was silent for a moment, surveying it. "He's gone in for black subjects, eh? Never cared much for the black-and-tans myself."

"No, no!" Sharlene remonstrated. "This is a great Rajput king in India—"

"Doesn't interest me either. Come on, love, let's go home." Then in a lower voice, "You beautiful baby—"

"Silly . . . Wait, I'll put this catalogue back—"

And then she saw Stuart Pennington in the shadows, his nose almost pressed against a huge, garish picture of ships at sea.

"Stuart!" she cried when she could get her breath.

He turned and bowed and Kent saw, to his chagrin, that he was suppressing a smile. "How do you do?" he said cheerfully. "I couldn't help hearing your comments on my picture, Damerell, and I'm smiling but I'm hurt."

He shook hands laughingly, impersonally, without even a change of color. He even met Sharlene's startled eyes tranquilly as if she were a casual acquaintance.

Nothing else could so completely have convinced his former wife of his indifference. If he had cared about—or hated—her, he could not have been so remote. She acknowledged that he was quite cured, and was thankful. Only, with feminine perversity, she was also a little bit sorry.

"I love the picture, Stuart," she said haltingly. "I—I'm glad you are working again."

Thanks

"Come along, Sharlene," urged Kent, taking her arm in his large, possessive way, "we're going to be late to the Farrington dinner."

Sharlene drew in her breath sharply. It was reminiscent of another night—another husband.

"We're going to be late to the Farrington dinner." But Stuart did not flicker an eyelash. He had successfully forgotten his Prince Consort days. Kent conducted her toward the door, hand on her arm.

"Don't mind my criticism, Pennington," Kent threw over his shoulder. "Art's out of my line."

Kent Irritated

"I know it," Stuart assented with a grin. "You probably know as much about art as I do about airplanes. Good afternoon."

"Goodbye, Stuart," Sharlene said, mustering a little smile before she disappeared.

"Six o'clock!" exclaimed Kent as they hurried down the corridor. "I had no idea I was so late. You'll have to get used to a business man for your husband—"

"The tired business man," Sharlene amended with a smile.

"No fooling, Sharlene, I did have an awful lot of things to see to. My lawyer—"

"Lawyers are awful bores, aren't they, dear?"

"Well, they have their uses."

"Oh, of course, they have their uses."

He glanced at her quickly. "Then the traffic was frightful—"

"Yes," she agreed without a smile. "It was so awfully crowded I don't see how you ever got around."

He felt a mounting sense of irritation, and he could not have told why. They were crossing in front of the entrance to the dansant court.

"Oh, Monsieur!" a waiter ran out to detain Kent. Kent saw what he held in his hand and started to hurry on with a muttered word, but Sharlene had also seen what was in the man's hand, and she held her husband back.

"The man wants to speak to you, Kent."

"Oh, Monsieur," the waiter said quickly, "I t'ink your lady, she leave dis fur neck piece!"

"Don't know anything about it," Kent said brusquely.

"Wait, Kent. We should really try to help find the owner of a gorgeous big animal pelt like this!"

"It belong to de lady you dance wit', Monsieur, she just went out wit' you!"

Kent cleared his throat and glared. "I don't know what you're talking about."

Sharlene relented, though she could not keep her eyes from dancing. "The scarf belongs to Miss Julie De Vore, garcon. Kent, give him some money and have it sent to her."

"Jealous, Sharlene?"

Wordlessly, Kent dug into his pocket for his wallet. Wordlessly he accompanied his wife to his car parked outside, and settled himself behind the wheel.

"Well," he said at last, when he could not stand her demure silence any longer, "how did you guess that?"

She burst out laughing. "Oh, Kent, you're so funny! It wasn't guessing. I saw you—both."

He guided the car into the traffic of Wilshire Boulevard, and headed toward Beverly Hills. Yes? Where?"

"In the court—dancing."

"Oh, so you've taken to going there?"

"Not usually. Just showing Mother the spectacle."

"H'm. What did she say when she saw me with Julie? Disapproving, of course."

"No. I explained that you were there on business."

He was silent for a couple of miles, while Sharlene watched the Hollywood hills turn from amethyst to blue, etched darkly against the evening sky with the effect of an artfully lighted back drop in a theater.

He asked, "Did it make you jealous, Sharlene?"

She turned her lovely eyes on him and smiled. "Why, dearest, dearest! Never! I couldn't be!"

"I almost wish you were," he said discontentedly.

"Jealous of Julie? Don't be silly. She couldn't really interest you—any more than she could Stuart!"

"What!" He narrowly averted a collision. "What do you mean—Julie and Pennington?"

"Oh, that's ancient history!" Sharlene laughed. "Julie modeled for Stuart years ago when she was first in the movies."

"Model. H'm. I see." Kent said nothing more, but he was thinking savagely. . . . By gad! Could it be? . . . He—the dashing Damerell—seemed to be acquiring a habit of playing second fiddle to Stuart Pennington!!

* * *

Julie's new cottage at Malibou Beach was full of hangers-on that Saturday afternoon. They arrived in swarms to wear her bathing suits, use her towels, drink her gin and consume whatever food they could lay hands on.

They had possessed the house every week-end since it was finished. Miss Gray her companion and social mentor, was powerless to control the invasion because Julie herself was so pleased to have them there. La De Vore craved popularity and did not quibble at the price.

On the square of sand allotted to her cottage at the edge of the sea the bathers lay under umbrellas as thick as a herd of wet seals, squealing and flipping about in an absurdly sealish manner.

They went into the ocean at intervals, but spent most of the time sipping long cold drinks and smoking endless cigarettes.

Julie Sees Kent

As Miss Gray made her way shrinkingly among the recumbent forms, of whom she so heartily disapproved, Julie rose from the mass and pulled a languid, sunburned youth into a game of beach ball. (She had to wage grim warfare on the flesh if not the devil, to keep her film form.)

Miss Gray came toward Julie, dodging the ball unsuccessfully. It bounced on the top of her head and knocked off her glasses, which did not add to the sweetness of her temper.

"Julie!" she said sharply, "Mr. Damerell has come—"

"What? Out here?"

"I had him wait in the living room because I didn't think you'd want to see him in this mess!" She looked haughtily about her.

Warren, you hold him there till I get rid of the bunch." She ran over to her pals. "Kids, you gotta scram!"

A groan went up. "Aw, Julie, have a heart!"

"I mean it! Beat it! I've got an important caller—and I've got to be dignified. Hurry up!"

"You go on an' be dignified an' leave us be!" all but yawned the languid youth, stretching out again under an umbrella.

"Jose! No more drinks!" Julie called to the Filipino boy who was bringing out a tray. "You take up all the glasses—"

"Hey!" Each guest reached hastily for his glass and drained the dregs.

"Now you kids go crash some other party down the beach," said Julie firmly, "and don't go home with my bathing suits."

Setting Up Side Suit

Quite frequently when playing a two-suited hand with one of the suits as trumps it is best to tackle the plain suit before exhausting trumps.

If the plain suit breaks badly, it may be possible to expedite its establishment by ruffing.

If the trump suit breaks badly, an established side suit may be an invaluable aid.

In today's hand the observance of this principle was the decisive factor.

(1) Although North has the honor-trick requirements for a Forcing Takeout, he is not quite sure of a fit. With another low spade or a slightly stronger diamond suit a Forcing Takeout would be in order. In the 1935 Culbertson System South is compelled to rebid, so North can safely make a simple takeout.

(2) North shows the full power of the hand at this point.

(3) It is clear to South that the hand must play at a major suit. Since he is likely to be forced, he chooses his longest suit. North's notrump bid assures him of at least neutral support in both suits.

West opened his fourth best club, hoping to shorten declarer's trumps. Dummy won with the Ace and led a heart, South's King winning. A small heart was returned, West discarding a low club.

East won with the Jack and returned a club, declarer ruffing. Another heart was surrendered to East (West discarding his last club) and the club return was ruffed by declarer and overruffed by West.

West returned a diamond, dummy winning with the King. The Ace of diamonds furnished a discard for a heart and a low diamond was ruffed. The last heart was next led and West was helpless.

If he ruffed dummy would overruff, declarer would draw trumps. If he failed to ruff, dummy would ruff with the deuce and the three master trumps would take the last three tricks.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Sure Cure for Husband Who Was Mum as An Oyster

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

IS SILENCE a new form of torture?

I've never thought much about it until a few weeks ago when I received a letter from a woman who told me her husband had not spoken an unnecessary word to her in years.

He said "yes" and "no," gave the briefest orders about his requirements, and beyond that practically never opened his mouth except for the admission of food.

Extracts from two letters follow. The writer of the first letter has lost her nerve from silence treatment. The other, with more spirit, tried a little domestic discipline until the "strong, silent man" begged for mercy. I leave it to you which is better, to "suffer in silence" or to turn the tables.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My husband is simply driving me crazy, because he will not talk to me. If I try to talk, he answers 'yes' or 'no' and goes on with his reading. He never acted this way before we were married. When I beg him to talk to me, he says, 'What could I talk to you about?'

"He never takes me with him when he goes places. If I had money I'd get a divorce, but I haven't any, and I'm not strong. I have among my friends so many who are happily married, and I look at them with envy. I'd do anything to make our marriage a success, but I don't know how to fight this horror.

"L. M. F."

The other letter is from a woman who met the situation as follows:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I, too, was married to one of these 'strong, silent men.' As I earned 50 per cent of the family income the torture was not for me. I got the children to bed early every evening, and invited three or four friends to the house. My husband greeted them as usual, then began to read his evening paper. They had been tipped off before, sat in the same room, and never uttered a word.

"The next evening I invited some of my family, who also were congealed in a silence as disconcerting as his own. They did not leave until he went upstairs.

"At meals I never spoke. In pantomime I would hold up a coffee cup and two fingers to ask if he wanted a second cup. I kept the children away from him as much as possible, so that their pleasant chatter might not break the monotony. I went around on tiptoe. When I did speak to someone else, it was in a ghostly whisper.

"At the end of two weeks, my 'strong, silent' mate began to get fidgetty. He'd ask questions. I'd shake my head 'yes' or 'no.' He begged me to be sensible. I pointed to him as my model.

"I kept up the silent treatment until I beat him at his own game. I'll admit it was hard, and it would not have been possible if I had not had my own money. These suggestions may interest wives who have been submitted to the 'thunders of silence.'

"SASSY WIFE."

Would You Love Her? Would You Love Her?

NELL BRINKLEY ASKS:

Cotton Simplicity Or Silk and Lace Elaboration?

We asked four people. Two men. Two women. One man looked at the girl in cotton with handwork that she had made herself, at the curls on her neck. He said: "Simplicity, of course. You couldn't make a sweet face, that you loved, any sweeter with expensive underthings." One woman said: "I'm not sure. What about the girl or woman who's face is not so lovely. She needs beautiful surroundings."

The other man said: "I think it would depend on the girl. Some women would grace sack-cloth."

The other woman said: "It would depend on the man, of course! Some men like to decorate their wives. Other men can see the soul of a woman more clearly, and simplicity calls out the tenderness and gallantry, protectiveness and admiration that tea-rose satin and fluff would never effect."

I wonder what the girls and their young husbands think about that?

Milk Pack TREATS Blemishes

Question: Please tell me the cause of whiteheads? My complexion has always been smooth textured until a few months ago. The whiteheads started forming on my cheeks. I have always taken excellent care of my skin and cannot account for the presence of these whiteheads. What do you advise?

Helen F., Manchester, N. H.

Answer: Whiteheads are accumulations of sebaceous substances lodged in pores. The mouth of the pore closes, and because there is no outlet, a bead-like mass forms. Temporary relief from these pests can be obtained by sterilizing the point of a needle over a flame and lancing the whitehead. Cut an up and down slit with the needle, hold the wound open, pick out the whitehead. It is next to impossible to press it out. Close the pores with alcohol. To permanently rid your skin of whiteheads send for my One Week Milk Pack. The treatment should do away with them for all time. To obtain this leaflet merely send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American.

Question: Have glands anything to do with the size of the bust? My bust is out of proportion to the rest of my body.

Mrs. Dorothy G. McS., Cambridge

Answer: Yes, internal glands practically control the size of the bust. Diet and exercise are the only safe means of reducing. I have a set of new bust exercises for the woman whose bust is large, though the rest of her body is thin. Write to this department again, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for these bust exercises.

Star Pampers Fingernails

(Posed by June Lang)

June Lang Uses Fine New Cream

By Juliet Shelby

DON'T THINK that you are the only woman who suffers from unruly cuticle around the fingernails.

Women in every part of the world complain about roughened, hard and ragged cuticle.

Hard water, change of climate or weather, illness, improper diet—all conspire to ruin the beauty of the hands.

June Lang's beautifully shaped fingers are topped off by perfect nails long, lacquered in the lighter shades, with each "moon" in defined outline. She never shows a sign of roughened cuticle, and her hands are as smooth and lovely as her face.

Naturally, June has to go to some trouble to keep her hands so appealing. She is no more fortunate than you or I, but she is far more persistent in her hand grooming than most women I know.

She favors an excellent product which actually prevents nails from drying and cracking and which banishes the unruly cuticle when the preparation is rubbed around the nail and the fingers soaked in warm water. No scissors are needed! Neither muss nor fuss is required!

This new product, a cream which works rather like a liquid cuticle remover, is easy to use. If you lightly massage your nails with it, after washing your hands, it will counteract the ravages of extreme heat or cold and will keep your cuticle softened. It is splendid to use before bathing in salt water.

To learn the name of this excellent finger nail preparation and where it is sold, phone Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self addressed envelope.

DARKNESS Prevents Introduction

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Four persons are leaving after spending an evening visiting us. I will call them A, B, C and D. We accompany them to their car which is parked in an alley in the rear of the apartment where we live. It is late in the evening, dark and cold.

Two other persons drive up after our guests are seated and ready to drive away. I will call the newcomers E. and F. E and F know Mrs. A and Mr. B, but have never met Mr. and Mrs. C and D.

There is no time for conversation of any kind and in the darkness they could not possibly see the parties concerned. What I would like to know is, if, under these conditions, an introduction was necessary or proper? C.

Under these circumstances it would be entirely out of order, very forced indeed, to attempt to make any introductions.

GENTLEMAN ASSISTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Does a gentleman always help a lady put on her coat, or is it proper for to do so herself? 2. Does he always open the door for the lady when they are leaving the lady's home together?

CONSTANT READER.

1. The man should help the woman put on her coat. This is a polite service that a woman always expect of a man. One more thing about this: he should not give over this gallantry to a servant. That is, when they are given a table in a restaurant, he does not take his seat until he has gone to the woman's chair and helped her take off her coat and arranged it on the back of the chair. And when they start to leave, he again goes to her chair and helps her on with her coat. 2. Yes. And a well-bred woman waits for a man to open a door for her.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions submitted by readers.)

The Perfect Hostess

NO MAID, YET HER SERVICE IS SERENE

Picture the three-in-one lady—playing the most difficult of all home roles! Cook, waitress, hostess. And doing it so gracefully that the guests do not miss a maid.

How does she do it, you ask? Well, for one thing, as she must be unflurried, gracious, interesting, she decides on something to eat that will be good but simple—both to cook and to serve. And she plans every little detail well in advance.

Say you're giving a luncheon for eight. Here's how you might work it: Have three courses. For the first, serve soup in those attractive, covered bowls that are so popular. The covers keep the soup nice and hot. Thus you could have the bowls already on the table when the guests sit down.

The Second Course

Let's say the second course is a salad. This should be standing ready (and the dessert, too) with plates and serving spoons—on an extra table or tea wagon, placed conveniently at your right.

When the soup is finished, you will first put the cover on your own bowl, then remove it and the service plate to the side table, and substitute the salad and plates. As you serve the salad, exchange it with each guest for his or her soup and service plate—placing the latter on your extra table. Wafers or sandwiches may already be on the main table. Or perhaps you will rise just this once, to get a hot bread from the oven. Dessert is served the same way. Coffee is served later in the living room. A perfect meal, and a perfect hostess!

A Helpful Booklet

Sounds simple, doesn't it? Well, it really is. Simplicity is the keynote of all good table service today, so it's easier to entertain than you might think, even though you're maidless. Our new booklet, TABLE SETTING AND SERVICE, tells the ins and outs of it all:

Glass China Silver
Table Covering and Decoration
Dinner Luncheon Breakfast
After-Dinner Coffee
Afternoon Tea Buffet Supper
Diagrams of Table Setting
Maidless Service

Excellent photographs and diagrams make these subjects doubly interesting. To order this 40-page booklet use the coupon below.

CHAPTER 279

LILLIAN WAITED for a second, her hand upon the door knob, evidently pondering Hugh's query as to how Sam Brixton could have climbed back to his own room, noiselessly and leaving no trace, if his had been the footfall upon the balcony outside the nursery suite which Hugh said he had heard.

"I know," she said at last. "It does sound like a far-fetched theory. But," and her voice suddenly sounded stubborn, "it could be managed with the aid of a stout rope. The boys used to hitch up the board, but of course, an adult would need something else. Yet it isn't an impossible feat, by any manner of means. The distance is too short."

She straightened herself and turned the knob.

"I'll only be a minute," she promised, and vanished into the corridor.

Hugh had risen, of course, with her, and no sooner had she left the door than with mighty but noiseless strides he too was at the door.

HUGH STANDS GUARD

"Better turn out that light again," he said as he passed me, and I obeyed, my movements quiet, but my pulses thumping as if they would burst through my skin.

I noticed that Hugh did not go into the corridor, but stood just inside the door of the room in which we were. His attitude was tense, watchful, and I knew that Lillian was safe, even if my sudden preposterous fear should materialize—the fear that Sam Brixton might try to harm her. Hugh's tall, powerful figure was a guarantee of safety, I told myself, with reminiscent gratitude for the many times he had been a bulwark against danger for me and mine.

Then Lillian was knocking softly but insistently upon Helena's door and calling, "Helena! Helena, dear! I must speak to you!"

There was no answer at first, but at her repetition of the call and knock I heard the grating of a key in a lock, and the next instant Lillian's voice, with an accusing note in her exclamation.

"Sam! You here! I thought you were at the Larches."

"Hush!" Sam Brixton's whisper was raucous and distinct. "I didn't know I was going to be here, either, but when Carol said she could bunk with Marion, Helena asked me not to leave her alone, as she had one of her headaches coming on. I've just got her to sleep, and I sure don't want her wakened."

BRIXTON'S EXCUSE

In his voice was the roughness, the almost rudeness with which he shelters his wife from every possible adverse wind. It is the best thing about Samuel Brixton, this devotion to his wife, and I found myself hoping that Lillian suspicions of this old comrade of Marion's father—the recreant husband who had made Lillian's life so miserable in the old dead days—would prove groundless.

"I'm sorry." Lillian's voice was low and conventionally contrite. I could not tell at all what she was thinking. "I did not know Helena had a headache. She certainly did not look as if she had one when I saw her last."

"Well, she has one now," Sam Brixton retorted stubbornly. "You've known her long enough to know how quickly they attack her."

THE ACCUSATION!

"Yes, that's right," Lillian answered slowly. "And I won't need to bother her. You'll do just as well."

"Why; what do you want of me?"

"Nothing much." Lillian's murmur was like the purr of a cat. "I just wondered how you managed to keep Helena from waking when you slid down to the nursery balcony a while ago, and climbed back when you saw our light go out."

"You—you—What do you mean by that rot?" Samuel Brixton gasped. "What are you trying to put over on me?"

Perfect Roasting

By MARTHA LEE
From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

A BRIDE begs for a way of telling when meat is cooked—not a test by time and temperature but a practical test that will always work.

The only practical test there is for meat cookery is testing it with a fork. When the fork will go through the meat easily it is cooked.

Or cutting a slice to see if it is of the desired doneness.

If the meat has been seared too long at too high a temperature it will be dry and unappetizing. The time and temperature chart is really the most practical way of telling when the meat is done.

This question of meat cookery has taken a great deal of time and attention of the home economists lately and all studies say that meat should not be seared. We have all been told the value of searing it to retain the juices, but it has been shown that the unseared roast is just as juicy as the seared one. The only value of searing lies in improving the color and flavor of the outside.

Basting roasts has also gone out of use. The roast is placed in an open pan with the fat side up and the fat on the meat bastes it. If the roast lacks fat of its own the market man will wrap it with a piece of fat. Roasts are no longer covered during cooking. They should be placed on a trivet or a small rack to keep them from the bottom of the roaster. Water is never added to roasts, for strangely enough, it has been found to make them less juicy.

The temperature under these new rules is much lower than we have been used to using. A slower oven is advocated for all cuts of meat.

Meat thermometers are being used more and more. It is the most scientific and accurate way of cooking meats. When inserting the meat thermometer remember to insert it so that it touches the center of the meat and rests on neither the fat nor the bone.

Here is a table giving the oven temperatures, the minutes per pound and the thermometer temperature for the cooking of ordinary roasts of meat.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must get at the cause—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the intestines, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c, 30c, 60c.

This Is Life

ROBERT E. ROGERS

There is nothing more amusing to watch than the devious ways of communistic logic, as prepared either for home consumption or for the innocent bystander. It has a cool effrontery all its own.

Starting with one and the same premise it invariably reaches one conclusion for Soviet Russia and another, opposite, conclusion for the United States of America.

Last Christmas during one of those intercollegiate conferences conducted by boys and girls still wet behind the ears to persuade their fellows that everything American is wrong and everything Russian is right, a youth made the usual argument calling for the demobilization of the U. S. Army, the Navy, the R. O. T. C. and the National Guard, on the ground that they made war inevitable.

Robert E. Rogers

But when he was asked, "How about the army of the U. S. S. R.?" he replied simply and beautifully, "Oh, that's different!"

Recently I saw a paragraph in perhaps the most heavily endowed of the American Communistic (if that be not a contradiction in terms) magazines. An editorial paragraph enthused about the report made to the recent All-Union Congress of the U. S. S. R., recapitulating the growth of the Red Army in recent years.

"The Assistant-Defence Commissar stated that the size of the Red Army had been increased from less than 600,000 two years ago to 940,000. Fortifications have been built near frontiers and garrisons established.

"It has been necessary to increase appropriations for defense. In 1934 the figure rose to 5,000,000 rubles. In 1935 the cost of defending Socialism against would-be aggressors will be 6,500,000 rubles. Tank production increased by 700 per cent; heavy artillery by more than 200 per cent."

Conclusion

Then comes the superb and logical conclusion.

"The achievements of Stalin, Voroshilov and Odjonikidze in creating such a fighting force have directly contributed to the peace of the world."

Well, let us admit that the huge professional Russian Red Army is maintained entirely for defence. In which case where do the Reds get off with their contention that our pitiful little army, our out of date navy, our amateur National Guard and our school boys are menaces to the peace of the world? The logic goes so haywire that one should think the most illiterate communist might gag a little at it.

Our Red brethren might at least do us the intellectual courtesy of admitting that even a capitalist army might be maintained for defence. But there we run into dogma and the Marxian dogma is mighty and shall prevail.

Another example is almost too silly to mention. It appears in the same magazine on the date of Lincoln's birthday.

"This issue appearing on Lincoln's birthday gives us an opportunity to bring to the attention of our readers a seldom quoted declaration of Abraham Lincoln's. He said:

"'This country belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of their existing government they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to dismember or overthrow it.'"

The implication, you see, is that Lincoln would heartily approve, on strictly American grounds, of a Communist revolution.

Deeds More Useful

But somehow that comment seems to leave out something. It seems incomplete. It seems to forget that when the "revolutionary movement to dismember or overthrow" the government finally arrived, Abraham Lincoln, in the face of the southern confederacy, of the abolitionists, of the copperheads, and of all the cranks and crackpots and pacifists in the north, fought for four years through to the unconditional surrender of the south.

In this particular case Lincoln's deeds ought to be a more useful reminder to our American theorists than Lincoln's words. If our friends the enemy do not think so, let them try it out.

Turning Slowly to Stone

By a strange freak of fate, a rare disease, "calcinosis," is turning the beautiful body of Rola Brayton, former Hollywood artists' and sculptors' model, to stone as lifeless as the marble statues made in her image. She shows how the deadly malady, only 28 cases of which are on record, has begun to affect the muscles of her legs, as deposits of calcium from the blood stream are diverted into the tissues. LEDERER On Radio with MARY

DRAMATIC MIKE HIGHLIGHT

By N. F. T.

America's popular player and theatrical personality, namely Mary Pickford, more or less shares her broadcasting spotlight (WEEI) tonight at 8 o'clock.

Francis Lederer, young star of stage and screen successes these last two or three years, will assume the leading man role opposite Mary in a "mike" adaptation of the striking Austen Strong play "Seventh Heaven."

This distinctive vehicle was an outstanding footlight attraction on Broadway when produced by John Golden. Two solid years of capacity attendance marked its money making stay on the thoroughfare of white lights. Filmdom subsequently fashioned it into a screen effort extraordinary. Thus the networks serve it up for loudspeaker patronage.

"N. F. T."

LADY OF THE PRESS

Gracie Allen gets herself into the hectic but fascinating fold of newspapering folk (WNAC) this evening at 9:30 p. m. Gracie thinks she has a few fine points to pass along in connection with gaining net paid circulation. George Burns must bear the brunt of her buffooning, as usual.

* * *

When the "Penthouse Party" puts into space (WBZ) on the stroke of 8 o'clock tonight, the voice of Peg La Centra is slated to be heard in singing and acting turns.

Peg is the plucky Boston girl who headed New York way some three years ago to carve a niche for herself in the sound sanctum realm.

One of her last impressive bits in Hub studio circles, was a prominent part in a half hour offering directed by this writer, a role in the special adaptation of the film "Way Down East" starring Seth (Phil Lord) Parker.

That was when the theater and movie magnates were not exactly enthusiastic. Verily, they had to be literally hammered and tonged into putting a feature picture preview on the air.

How next to impossible it was to stir them with the thought that to dramatize movies by radio would help rather than hinder the box office take.

So much for a bit of pioneering era retrospect, since Boston was perhaps the first city in America to present screen production themes for the air audience. Nowadays the practice is a big part of the extensive Hollywood promotion routine when star-studded flickers are released.

LEGION LEADER

Frank N. Belgrano, national commander of the American Legion, will be heard (WNAC) this evening from 11:45 p. m. to midnight. Developments in connection with current soldiers' bonus legislation will constitute the timely topic for discussion.

* * *

The male chorus from the McNeill Club, oldest musical society in California, founded in Sacramento in 1850, will be heard during the John Charles Thomas program (WBZ) tonight at 9:30 p. m.

The chorus is composed of 50 voices and has long been prominent in the musical history of California.

Our Constitution

By Hendrik Van Loon

The Constitution of the United States is one of those documents for which everybody is ready to die, but few people take the trouble to read.

Like all citizens by choice (and not merely by the accident of birth) I once upon a time had to swear an oath which among other things asked me to uphold the Constitution of the United States against all its enemies.

Before I took this oath, I thought I might as well know what sort of document I was supposed to uphold against all its enemies, and being a methodical sort of person—in all matters not pertaining to finance—I studied this interesting state paper with a great deal of care.

Parts of it I learned by heart, and I always keep a copy of it on my desk for reference.

Since then I have repeatedly had occasion to regret my knowledge of the Fundamental Law of the Land. It has got me into many difficulties.

For we have with us a sort of citizens who, while bravely professing their love for the handiwork of the founding fathers, have not the slightest desire to run the government of our country according to the Constitution as it was actually written, but according to their own notions of how they think it should have been writ.

When you most respectfully draw their attention to the fact that what they suggest is in direct opposition to the famous charter of September 17, 1787, they either call you a foreigner or holler for the police and immigration authorities, that you may be sent back to where you came from, and in other ways they give the most unmistakable evidence of their sincere displeasure.

And when you offer to quote them article, section or paragraph to show that you are merely quoting from the document which they so profoundly revere, they merely ask you to wait until the day they can show you just exactly how they feel about you.

All the time the document is right there for them to read. It is all very mysterious. But perhaps they can't read, and feel embarrassed at the suggestion!

* * *

Now, turning to my copy of the Constitution, I find that Article 1, Section 1, states that "all legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives," while Article 2, Section 1, says explicitly that "the executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America."

* * *

It seems to me (and historically speaking, I am in excellent company) that this language is about as direct and simple as language can ever hope to be. Our country apparently is supposed to be ruled by a President who is to act as the executive and who is supposed to execute the laws that are made for us by Congress.

Radio Questions, Answers

Q—Is it true that programs from New York and Chicago have first call over Boston broadcasts when choices must be made?
—Native, of Natick.

A—Not always, but usually the network features are backed by more money and very often the local outlets have agreed by contract to give the out of town turns the preference—this particular condition constitutes a major problem in radio circles.

Q:—Does the voice of "Scrappy" Lambert come through in a talking role on the "Showboat" hour and is he one of the quartet members in that program?—G. F. R. of Charlestown.

A:—All he ever says is "Okay, Captain" when they call for the "gangplank" to be lowered. Yes, you hear Lambert singing as one of the "Showboat" four.

Q:—What has become of Eleanor Talcott, the songstress who was heard in Boston so much last year? Was she really an heiress? —H. F. D. of Auburndale.

A:—Eleanor has been singing at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, but returns as a guest artist to sing with the Ranny Weeks orchestra here next Sunday night. Yes, her folks are the founders and leading citizens of Talcottville, Conn.

Q—Is it true that the "Town Hall Tonight" hour with Fred Allen goes on the air twice each week? I mean on the same night?

Time Tender, of Brighton.

A—There is a second setting on Wednesday night, repeating the entire presentation for West Coast listeners, broadcast in New York at midnight, which means 9 o'clock out on the Pacific Coast.

Q—Who is the man who plays "Sherlock Holmes" on the air? Was the character formerly portrayed by Richard Gordon?

W. K. T., of Newton.

A—It is Louis Hector. Yes, Gordon was the fellow.

RUTH MAY SAVE JUDGE

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1935

AUSTEN LAKE on

The Babe Comes Home

NEW YORK, FEB. 27—When Judge Emil Fuchs arrived in the Grand Central depot recently, he came with a weight of woe hanging from his chins, a trunkful of misery on his back and the wolves of despair nipping at his heels.

Austen Lake

But when he departed, a little while later, he tap-danced his way down the ramp to the Boston train, the corners of his mouth playing leap frog with his eyebrows and a big brown cigar glowing like an engine headlight.

In a twitch of a kitten's whiskers, and by using Babe Ruth's personality for pigment, the Old Jedge had changed the Braves from a dingy, battleship gray to more colors than a gypsy's shirt, a drunkard's blush, or a co-ed's complexion.

With one desperate swipe of his crutch he had restored Boston's Alsace-Lorraine vindicated the virtue which Harry Frazee had sold for a mess of Yankee pottage and restored to his city the aging glory that is Babe Ruth's.

* * *

Bostonian at Heart

THIS COST THE JUDGE a pretty penny, no doubt, in cash and promises. For old Ulysses Ruth is no bargain basement pick-up even in his fat, forty and florid state.

To begin with, the Babe is more things with the Braves than Benito Mussolini is to Rome.

He is an active outfielder, a deputy manager, second vice-president, publicity tub thumper and a sort of financial cork jacket by which the Braves hope to keep their investment afloat.

Whatever Babe's understanding with Fuchs and whatever pledges he has received, he paused before shoving off on a much-needed vacation from the mental stress of having made this decision, to say how he had always been a Bostonian at heart and that he would give his all to Bill McKechnie, Judge Fuchs, C. F. Adams and the little, dirty-faced kids of the street.

* * *

He's Still the Babe

SO COMES THE BABE back to the scenes of his early manhood, where he arrived 21 years ago with his worldly wealth wrapped up in a handkerchief.

He was a gangling lad of 20 then, with a stomach flat as a poor-house purse, and manners rough as a tax collector.

To the lad who had been schooled on Baltimore's cobbles, under the wheels of drays, picking an urchin's catch-as-catch-can living, the first $1300 salary he drew for a season with the Red Sox was like tapping the U. S. mint.

And now, at 41, Babe comes back, polished by the intervening years, first in the hearts of his coudtrymen and gentled after much moral stock taking.

What does it matter that the portly swellings of middle age hang from his middle, that his sand-piper legs are begging for relief

In the eyes of one and all he is still Babe, whose ills and injuries have been matters of great national concern and whose every slight word has brought the reporters galloping.

* * *

Yawkey's Generosity

It is reasonable that Babe should come back to Boston on the opposite side of Commonwealth ave.

From his beginnings, to act as sick doctor to the Braves' stalled fortunes, as he served and saved the game in its Black Sox 1919 emergency.

THE MISSUS THE KID BABE

He must be getting something pretty good to induce a proud man like Colonel Ruppert to allow such an American League treasure to slide over to the National League opposition.

The Colonel has often sworn, by the gray beards of his ancestors, that Babe would play for no other club than his own and that only a managership or a ball job of similar proportion would let him untie such a public hum.

And it would take a goodish proposition to impress Mrs. Claire Ruth, the hero's lady wife, who is nurse-maid to the Babe's foundling finances and who founded Ruth's sober, frugal phase when she married him as a manager.

* * *

Huzza

When Tom Yawkey, the Red Sox Croesus, greeted his Pullman guests at the Pennsylvania station, he confessed that he had been first to waive on Ruth at Colonel Ruppert's telephoned inquiry.

Now, mind, a lesser man, with as lavish an investment as Yawkey has in his Fenway yard ($3,000,000) would have stymied Ruth from passing into competitive hands.

His simple "no" would have shut Ruth out of Braves Field as effectively as his "no" shut out the possibility of dog racing there last month, when he refused Fuchs and co-tenants cooperation in their whippet-track venture.

But he said, on greeting us at the Pennsylvania station, "I am delighted to see Babe land in Boston. He will offset the horse track influence. He will do for the Braves what dog racing never could have done."

It is a fair sporting gesture that should cement whatever relations between the two clubs were fractured in the late canine tiff

So now, as the baseball authors soar South again, the prospect of reviewing the Braves as warm-over of the same familiar faces, are cheered by the thought that outfielder, deputy manager, second vice-president Babe will soon be waddling up to the plate at the Waterfront Park in St. Pete wearing Boston woolens, and the huzzas you hear will only be a thin, ghostly sample of the full bodied roar you will hear when the "Babe comes home."

McKECHNIE OUT EVENTUALLY

Ruth In

NO ROOM FOR TWO PILOTS ON CLUB

By Joe Cashman

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27—The only logical inference to be drawn from the acquisition of Babe Ruth by the Braves is that it insures new capital being invested in the club.

If the Sultan of Swat still were able to play fairly regularly, the American League would never lose the greatest drawing card in baseball history.

And as anything but a player Babe would never be worth his Tribal salary unless his connections with the club were certain to produce enough money to solve all its financial problems

The fact that he has signed a three-year contract bears out this theory He might be able to stagger through this coming season as a player but never through three more But if Bill McKechnie has his way, Ruth will positively start his campaign in the outfield

"I'm interested in Babe only as a player," says Wilkesbarre Bill, "as far as I'm concerned he isn't worth a nickel to the club except as an active performer.

PILOT OR BOSS

Babe is unlikely to offer any objections He's to receive a share of the club's profits, and he's smart enough to realize that the more often he plays the more black ink there'll be on the books

What will happen, however, when he can no longer don a uniform remains to be seen McKechnie wants no assistant managers He makes that clear.

"There never was a club big enough for two managers," he asserts, "I'll be absolute boss or nothing."

And Ruth has told the world he wants to be a pilot

Betting is that eventually arrangements will be made for McKechnie to pilot elsewhere with Ruth taking active charge of the Warriors

The [illegible] in camp express satisfaction over Babe's acquisition as a player

They feel that with the Big fellow and Rabbit Maranville they'll be the most colorful and popular team in the league and will hold their own with the Sox in the battle for Boston patronage

Garfield Bouts Friday Night

Garfield A. A. of Revere has been flooded with entries from all parts of the state for its next amateur boxing show Friday, at the Walkatoon Arena in Revere

So numerous have been the entries that the management has limited the number to 20 bouts for the evening

Denner, Penansky, Ferande, R. Fusco, Duine and Fortunate are entered to make fireworks in the 126-pound class

Aw, Gee!

Kids Lament Transfer

Two thousand kids mobbed Babe Ruth as he left Colonel Jacob Ruppert's brewery in New York after agreeing to come to Boston.

"Did you sign, Babe?" they chorused

"Yeah," he chuckled, "but with dear old Boston."

"Ah, gee, Babe, that's tough," they muttered

With which the Babe spent a solid hour or more autographing their books and cards, a total of 750 in all.

In Boston or New York, it makes no difference.

Babe is still the idol of those 2000 kids.

Mrs. Ruth Stamps Approval on Ruth Joining Braves

By Max Kase

New York, Feb. 27—The Ruth household, with the petite Claire Frau of George Herman doing the talking, today applauded the move which takes the Babe to Boston

"I'm tickled to death with the developments," Mrs. Ruth said,, her pretty features cloaked in a wide smile. "It's the finest thing the Babe could have done."

Mrs. Ruth has long been recognized as the power behind the throne so far as the Babe was concerned Her stamp of approval was almost essential before George Herman could make any of his business baseball moves.

It is safe to presume that she favored the step which prompted the mighty slugger to decide on shifting his allegiance from the Yankees and the American League to the Boston Braves.

Dizzy

Resents Ruth, Braves' Deal

Memphis, Tenn., Feb 27 (INS)—Dizzy Dean doesn't "cotton up" to the idea of Babe Ruth coming to the National League

Stopping off here en route to the Cardinal training camp at Bradenton, Fla., Dizzy ripped into both Ruth and the American League The latter, he inferred, was a close approximation to a Judas.

"Ruth should stay in the American League where he made his fortune," Dizzy spouted "Why doesn't the American League take care of its own players? I resent Ruth coming to the National League and believe every National League player feels the same He's not worth any $80,000 a year, why, I'm not even worth that!"

Dizzy said it looked to him like a move against Bill McKechnie, Boston Braves manager, who he described as "baseball's finest"

Miami, Feb. 27 (INS)—"The best ball team I've handled yet." That's Mr. Bill Terry's description of his 1935 New York Giants, expressed today as he watched the advance detachment amble through one of those apparently aimless but apparently necessary gestures known as a workout.

"You [illegible] 1933?" [illegible].

We lost both. Why, we thought we couldn't lose with that seven-game lead in September. And the next thing we knew, we had."

Tech Fencers Meet Y. M. C. A.

Technology's varsity fencing team will test swordsmanship against the crack Boston Y. M. C. A. duelists tonight at the "Y" gym at 7.30.

The Engineers, weakened through the loss of several of last year's stars, will provide the "Y" blades-men with stiff competition.

Captain Hugo Ferion in the foils, Enrique Suarez, a Cuban, in the epee, and Bill Toorks in the sabre are the Tech mainstays.

The Engineers lost their opener with Harvard but have come along fast since their opening meet, and Coach John Roth believes they will edge the "Y" team tonight.

MALONE Refused Yanks

St. Louis, Feb. 27 (INS)—Reports that the New York Yankees had been seeking the services of Pat Malone, pitcher acquired by the St. Louis Cardinals from the Chicago Cubs, were confirmed today by Cardinal officials. The offers were turned down, it was stated, as the result of Malone signing a Cardinal contract last week.

100 Games Goal OF BABE

HOPES TO PLAY 3 MORE YEARS

GOTHAM FANS WILL MISS BAMBINO

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 27—Babe Ruth, filled with enthusiasm by the deal which shifts him from the New York Yankees and the American League to the Boston Braves and the rival National League as a player, assistant club manager and vice president, talked confidently today of another big comeback.

"I ought to be able to play at least 100 games for the Braves this year," he declared. "I never felt better. I'm down to weight now—around 230—and if my legs hold out I hope to do my part toward helping my old friend Bill McKechnie land the Boston club up somewhere in the National League race.

"I know it's a tough league right now. Some of that pitching, like the Deans and Hubbell, will be plenty hard to crack, but I will welcome a chance to see what I can do.

Tickled With Chance

"I used to like hitting in the Polo Grounds, and from what I've seen and heard, some of the other fences around the National League will look like home to me again. Maybe, we will have some fun.

"I'm tickled to death with this chance, not only because it sends me back to an old home town, Boston, but because it gives me the best chance for a real future in the major leagues.

"I hope to play as long and as often as I can—maybe two or three years more—but I also feel I can look forward to a happy connection with the game, when my playing days are over."

The one-time [illegible] boy of Baltimore [illegible] in the town where he first gained major league baseball fame and where, as a [illegible] he will help [illegible] the financial situation of a club that only a month or so ago was in danger of becoming an orphan on the National League's doorstep.

The Boston club did not pay a cent for Ruth's release, thereby disposing of reports that Ruppert would demand substantial payment if he let the Babe go for any position except that of a full fledged manager.

Days Numbered

Even though the Babe's playing days are numbered, club owners believe his mere presence in the Braves' lineup will revive popular interest in the big fellow and attract attention to his exploits in new surroundings.

His departure from the scene of his greatest triumphs may not affect the pennant chances of the club managed by Joe McCarthy, however. Certain critics insisted last season that Ruth, on the field, was more of a handicap than a help because of his slowness.

But to the hundreds of thousands who have swarmed into the huge stadium to see the big fellow on the pipe-stem legs propel the ball into the right field bleachers—"Ruthville" to kids and grown ups who idolized the slugger—it won't be the same.

BRUINS CLIMB BY 5-0 VICTORY

TOURISTS FATIGUED

By Bill Grimes

Now that they have taken over one-half of the Rangers' interests in first place of the American Division, Bruins will be tougher to beat than they have been in two years . . . They are positively set upon their divisional championship.

Bruins shut out St. Louis Tourists 5 to 0 at the Garden while the Maroons hung a 3-1 defeat on Rangers in Montreal . . . While the Bruins are laying off tomorrow night, Rangers will play a return engagement with the Gorman group in New York . . . And what could be nicer than the Bruins tackling Maroons in Montreal after a four-day lay-off in a game which will be the third for the Montrealers this week.

EXCEPTION

Cooney Weiland, one of few Detroiters who is not an Olympic graduate.

Handicapped by the shortage of man power and the 14-hour trip from the Mound City, the Tourists were below form. But for the sensational goal minding of Bill Beveridge, they would have been buried under an avalanche of rubber . . . The Tourists left home at noon on Sunday but did not arrive here until 8.00 in the morning . . . In order to save $300, they were routed here via Chicago, Detroit, Toronto and Montreal . . . After the game, they crawled back into their sleeper and are now en route to Montreal.

Ossie Asmundson, who was sent to St. Louis by Detroit, was left [illegible] suffering from pleurisy . . . Manager George "Buck" Boucher has a very promising line [illegible] in Eddie Finnigan, [illegible] Cowley and Red Kelly . . . Buck predicts that Kelly will be a sensation next season . . . Some [illegible] comedian had a [illegible] the Garden and the game was stopped during the third period to get rid of the practical joker.

Teddy Graham, who was sent to St. Louis in the $47,000 Syd Howe and Scotty Bowman deal, still receives his checks from Detroit . . . Marty Barry will leave for Montreal tonight or tomorrow to get a look see at his newly born son . . . "Duke" McCurry was a gamester during his playing days, and he is just as courageous officiating, especially whenever a fist fight crops up.

Although he does not weigh much more than a straw hat, Duke has never been known to hesitate about flying into the widest frays.

With the exceptions of Cooney Weiland, Larry Aurie, Ebbie Goodfellow and Herbie Lewis, every member of the original squad that started with the Red Wings last fall has played with the Detroit Olympics.

Mr. Boston

Sharkey Drills In Gym

By Jack Conway

AROUND the town with Mr. Boston. Watching Jack Sharkey punch the small bag at Jerry Buckley's gym on Friend street, and expressing the thought that everybody would feel a bit better if they did a little exercising.

Rip Valenti dropping into the gym to take a peek at the former world heavyweight champion, and remarking that Sharkey could help the boxing game in this city by returning to the ring wars.

Mr. Boston

Sharkey hopping on the scales and weighing 215 pounds. He thought he would be heavier, and said he would continue training for a week or so.

Valenti telling me Tait Littman and Al McCoy should furnish a thrilling battle when they clash in a 10 round bout at a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden on March 8.

Littman licked Lou Broam and in Pittsburgh and is rated as one of the leading middleweights. Rip says he will have Jack McCarthy battling Tom Patrick on the same card.

Patrick won a close decision over McCarthy in a sizzling bout at Mechanics Building recently.

News from Charley Adams of the Braves that the Tribe has signed Babe Ruth as assistant manager. The Babe will also be a vice-president as well as a member of the board of directors.

He will play in Saturday, Sunday and holiday games and should take the Braves out of the red.

Official announcement confirmed Bill Corum's exclusive story published in the Boston Evening American on October 26, 1934, that Ruth was coming to the Braves.

Braves officials got high blood pressure denying the story and I hope they read their own statements in the newspapers.

Austen Lake also scooped the town a week ago on a story the Babe was to be a vice-president of the Braves.

Which proves that if you want real baseball news, and not press-agent handouts, it is wise to read the Boston Evening American.

DANNO'S DINNER

INTO THE family gasoline buggy and out to the Croft Brewery in Roxbury to sit in with Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, at a buffet luncheon.

President Rudolph P. Haseloff and Walter J. Croft, vice president and brew master, giving Danno a large welcome.

Paul Bowser, Neal O'Hara, Jack McGrath, LeRoy Atkinson, Doc Almy and the rest of the gay party drinking their share of ale and talking wrestling.

To the Hotel Bradford as guest of 1000 members of the Knights and Ladies of Saint Finbar as they tendered a reception and banquet to O'Mahoney.

Danno was presented with a watch, and then made a speech over a national radio hook up in which he said he was here to win the world heavyweight wrestling championship for Ireland.

Later Danno whispered to me he would try to conquer Len Macaluso in Worcester tonight, and then pin Gino Garibaldi at the Garden on Friday night.

Mayor John C. O'Mahoney of Worcester also made a speech in which he said he had given Danno the keys of the City of Worcester.

GEORGE ON FIRE

TELEGRAM from Ed Don George, world heavyweight wrestling champion in which he takes exception to statements made by O'Mahoney.

"I still believe O'Mahoney needs plenty of seasoning before he will be ready for a title bout," said Don.

"I would not be surprised if Garibaldi defeats the Irishman at the Garden on Friday night.

"Gino has been with the top flight wrestlers for two years, and his experience will give him an edge over Danno."

It is probably just as well for George that he didn't bow in at the O'Mahoney dinner at the Bradford. Even though he makes the Bradford his headquarters while in Boston.

I think George is too experienced for Danno right now. The Garibaldi bout, will give me a better line on the handsome Celt.

FULLER'S CHANCE

WORD from Harry Kelley in New York that Sammy Fuller is in splendid physical condition for his 15-round battle with Lou Ambers in the New York Garden on Friday night.

Fuller is below 137 pounds. He will be at 136 pounds by tomorrow night, and will then dry out. He will make 135 pounds easily, according to Kelley.

Dan Carroll wires he is hurrying North from Florida to handle Fuller in the Ambers bout. Dan has been in the land of sunshine with Tony Shucco.

A late telephone call from Mayor O'Mahoney of Worcester who wants me to be his guest at the Danno O'Mahoney-Macaluso bout in the Auditorium in Worcester tonight.

$20,000,000 FIGURE

Ruth Worth Million a Year, Says Damon Runyon

Nonpareil

COBB, SPEAKER, WAGNER CAN'T TOUCH HIM

By Damon Runyon

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Miami, Fla., Feb. 27—This writer computes the actual cash value of George Herman Ruth, called Babe, to organized baseball, at an average of $1,000,000 per year, in extra admission fees drawn by him alone around the big ring.

Thus in his 20 years of service, the mighty Babe has brought $20,000,000 to the game.

This figure takes no account of his advertising value which cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, for you can bundle all the great colorful characters of baseball of all time into one and throw them in the scales and Babe himself will outweigh them.

His passing from the stage of active baseball events to be an assistant manager and vice president of the Boston Braves today is historic in sport.

SPENDER

It ends the longest reign of great glory ever enjoyed by any individual in any one field of the sporting game. It marks the departure from real competition of the most beloved, the most picturesque of them all.

Great was Ruth—how great the generation to come will know better than we, for his deeds of prowess will grow with the passing of time, as is the case with all historic figures.

There have been far greater baseball players than the fat faced flat nosed, stilt-legged Sultan of Swat, among them Tyrus Raymond Cobb and Tris Speaker and George Sisler and a host of others, but never was there a man as picturesque or who held the affection of the public like Ruth.

From the halcyon days of his baseball youth, when he was a rootin' tootin' young galoot, who made $15,000 on a vaudeville tour, and spent more than that on wine and song—who lost $30,000 betting on the horses in Havana—down to the marriage, and the reformation that sent him into the carpet-slippers-and-pipe stage, he has been front page news.

He always lived his life in the open, he would make mistakes and confess them, and ask for forgiveness from his public and get it.

He never got anything like a fair proportion of the sums he brought to baseball, but he made a lot of money, and for years he spent it like a cowboy on a spree, until an astute gentleman named Christy Walsh got hold of him and taught him the rudiments of economy and saving.

Walsh and the lady who became Ruth's second wife, settled him down—and up.

For some years past the lurid lights of the redoubtable Babe's baseball youth have been but a vague memory to him.

He has had less fun, perhaps, but he lasted a lot longer.

He returns to the city where he started his big league career as a left-handed pitcher with the Boston Red Sox, and no matter what happens to him there in his new life, Babe probably does not have to worry about his future.

His batting prowess revolutionized the game of baseball. He bestrode his field like a colossus from the time the New York Yankees paid the then unheard of sum of $135,000 for him to Harry Frazee, owner of the Boston Red Sox.

Ruth's material monument is the Yankee Stadium in the Bronx. Without him, it might not have been built. He made New York an American League town at a time when the league was playing a strictly second fiddle to the Giants.

He was one of the men who saved baseball in the dark days of the "Black Sox" scandal, for here was one ball player that the public felt was the soul of baseball honor, however he might cavort in private life.

No breath of suspicion ever fell upon Babe Ruth. He stood up there at the plate, and battered the landscapes with his home runs, until he made the fans forget the skullduggery of the crooked players.

NONPAREIL

Baseball should be eternally grateful for Ruth and when he recently returned from a triumphant tour of the world, it was somewhat surprising to read that his future was in doubt, because you felt that, by this time the magnates would have formulated some plan for the preservation of his personality in baseball as long as he lives, even if they had to create some new office for him.

The Babe came home talking big, [illegible]

By grabbing George Herman Ruth, Judge Fuchs may have found the answer to his troubles.

At least he must be given credit for saving the name of baseball from the odium of leaving the greatest asset it has ever had out in the cold.

McKechnie Optimistic; Sees Braves Climbing

EXPECTS TO STRENGTHEN TRIBE BEFORE SEASON OPENS

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 27—Will McKechnie was sitting in the grandstand gazing intently at the diamond at Waterfront Park today; a view that brought back far more sad memories than glad ones to the Tribal pilot.

Ben Cantwell's arm went dead after he had won 20 games the previous season. Brown and Worthington failed in their comeback efforts. Randy Moore suffered a succession of ills. Whitney had his poorest season."

True to their boast that they would take the team total record for the season the Park five, of the City Hall League, swept onto the 20th Century alleys and fulfilled their promise by sweeping 1568 candlepins into the gutters.

Mike McNulty, one of the captains of the Parks, the only team in existence having two captains and no privates, was filled with enthusiasm as he reeled off his opening string of 131, only five pins shy of the string mark, and ended up with a total of 352, another nickel short of the prevailing record.

"RESCUE BY HEROIC DOG"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Listen to today's featured adventure, boys and girls, Fred H Wetherald of 39 Eldon street, Dorchester. I like his opening paragraph:

"Adventure," Fred says, "requires suspense, uncertainty, a sense of impending danger and a live chance to tell doubting friends all about it."

FLOYD GIBBONS

Right. I like the rest of Fred's story too. In fact I like a lot of the stories you are all sending in and I wish I had the space to print them all word for word. Fred's story is about a dog.

"His name was Clark," Fred says.

"The main part of him was of the breed known as Chesapeake—the rest, I am convinced, descended from those wooly prehistoric animals found imbedded in glacial ice. Only his eyes were beautiful and belied the ungainliness of his body.

"He was a big shaggy brute with brown curly haid and a throaty growl like the rumble of an earthquake. I promptly climbed a fence when I first saw him at the farm where I was to board—but after a month of hunting together we were inseparable pals. Clark had been created for swimming and hunting, even if his hobby was diving for stones in the half-barrel water trough."

And then one crisp winter day, when Jack Frost held the edges of the river in his icy grasp, man and dog faced the supreme test. It all happened on the Beaverhead River in Jefferson Valley, Montana.

Fred says he had just brought down a duck when Clark, for the first time, hesitated to retrieve. As the current was quickly taking the bird towards a shelf of ice Fred pushed the hesitating dog playfully into the water and ordered him to 'fetch."

Clark "fetched" like the little trooper he was and swam back through the icy water with the bird in his mouth. But as he tried to climb out on to the thin, slippery shore ice he slipped back into the stream.

Fred says he realized that the dog's instinct had warned him of this very difficulty and he saw with horror that at each attempt Clark was being carried nearer and nearer a heavy sheet of ice down stream. Unless something was done at once the dog was sure to be swept under that layer of ice to his death.

"I called to him," Fred says, "and attacked the shore ice with my gun-butt. It was too thick so I crawled out until it began to crack and worked desperately to split away a little bay through which the dog could swim to me. Then I lay down flat on my stomach to spread my weight over the thin ice and held out my arms to Clark.

"The intelligent dog was just marking time against the current waiting for me to do something. I could see relief and confidence in me in his beautiful eyes. Faithful old door mat—he still held the duck lightly in his mouth!

"I grabbed him by the scruff of the neck and with a heave, thrust the old boy back to safety behind me.

"It was a swell rescue. But it wasn't a complete success. As Clark went back—I slipped forward—an ominous crack and the ice broke under my chest. Like a ship leaving the ways I slipped quietly into the icy waters of the river—Clark and I had simply changed places!

I'll never forget the agony of that moment. It wasn't fear that I felt but an excruciating physical feeling of freezing. When I bobbed up I fought off the current and threw my arms over the ice shelf.

"It broke like an egg shell. I tried again and it broke again. Again and again. Then I went down and when I came up my head cracked against hard unyielding ice. I was under the ice shelf."

Well, Sir, Fred says that near as he was to death his past life didn't parade before him. He thought only of getting out from under that ice. And he did get out. But he found when he caught hold of the now firm ice that he was no longer strong enough to pull himself up on the shelf.

He lay hanging on the slippery edge—half in and half out—midway between life and death. Just a slight pull in either direction would decide his fate.

And then he noticed Clark.

"He was walking back and forth gingerly," Fred says, "like a stiff-kneed old gentleman doing a Virginia Reel. He wanted to do something but he couldn't make up his mind. I called to him and he stiff-toed out slowly toward me. I tried to dig my finger nails into the hard ice to hold on. Somehow or other I knew that if I could only hold on that old shaggy rug would get me out.

"He seemed by his deliberate movements to want to warn me not to take hold of him. But I couldn't if I had wanted to. The slightest change of position would have sent me slipping into Eternity.

"Then that big lump of shaggy sweetness—stepping carefully as a tight-rope walker—bared his teeth and gently got a firm grip on the sleeve of my outstretched arm.

"Did he tug suddenly and risk slipping? No, sir. He just spread out those toe nails of his and got a grip on the ice and made a tentative pull which increased gradually as his footing held. Pulling carefully together I felt myself gain an inch. It was enough to swing the scales and I rolled safe but cold on the firm ice. I hugged his wet hide to me. 'You old son of a so and so,' I called him—but I smiled."

Gosh! Fred, you and that "door mat" just played a whole symphony on the old Headline Hunter's heartstrings. I'm sending you along the ten spot and I don't have to tell you to get an armful of bones for Clark. Do I?

$10.00 EVERY DAY and $100.00 EVERY MONTH is what Floyd Gibbons will pay American readers to prove that more thrilling and interesting TRUE adventures happen in YOUR life and in the lives of your friends than anything fiction writers can invent. And Floyd will prove it every day on this page. The famous war correspondent's own life is filled with adventure. He was wounded in "No Man's Land," torpedoed in mid-Atlantic and rode with Death in the Sahara, but he wants to write YOUR story now. Send it in to him today. A yarn of the desert tomorrow.

Los Angeles, Feb. 27—Everybody but the Laemmles themselves are talking about the prospective buyers of Universal. Carl Laemmle, Sr., has been very sick for four or five weeks so that he hasn't had a chance to talk back to the rumor hounds. Today his son-in-law, Stanley Bergerman, announced that Universal is buying many stories and they wouldn't be doing that if they had any idea in their minds of disposing of Universal.

Conrad Veidt for Fine Arts

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter are the stars of "One More Spring," film version of the delightful Robert Nathan story, which inaugurates the week's new film bills at the Paramount and Fenway tomorrow.

Pat Patterson, Lew Ayres, Peggy Fears and Reginald Denny are featured in "Lottery Lover," the companion picture on the program. The film marks Miss Fears' screen debut, in a romance with music in which she sings several songs.

Today's new feature at the Fine Arts is "The Wandering Jew," which brings Conrad Veidt, star of "Power," to another dramatic role. The film is based on the famous story by E. Temple Thurston, and Peggy Ashcroft, one of England's favorite film stars, has the leading role opposite the star.

On the same program, sponsored by the Adult Education Council, will be "The Frog," another in the zoology series, "The Art of Spinning and Weaving," and Walt Disney's "Peculiar Penguins."

NEW HIGH

Shanghai, Feb. 27 (AP)—The Chinese dollar soared to a new high level today, spelling a further reduction in the rapidly decreasing buying power of thousands of Americans and other foreigners who are living in China on gold incomes.

The Chinese dollar closed at 39 1-16 cents, which means that the American dollar now buys only two dollars and 56 cents of Chinese money as compared with three dollars a few months ago.

The rapidly mounting Chinese dollar value is causing concern to Chinese exporters who fear the loss of foreign markets and an increasingly unfavorable trade balance.

SOUND SECURITY BILL FAVORED

SLOAN VIEWS GIVEN

By B. C. FORBES

I've been sounding out employers on how they feel about the employment security bill now before Congress.

The great majority favor sensible, feasible, maturely-considered legislation.

But almost every employer urges that no attempt be made to rush through such momentous legislation at this session.

Other questions important executives have answered for this column reveal:

Employers are practically unanimous in recommending that employees contribute part of the cost.

Seventy per cent favor contributions by the federal government.

Opinions divide sharply as to whether state governments should contribute.

About half of those expressing their views declare the bill, as now drawn, is not satisfactory.

President A. P. Sloan of General Motors strikes a note similar to that of many others. Thus:

"First, I am in favor of the principle of 'unemployment security,' providing the necessary plan to establish the principle does not burden industry to the extent that it defeats its own purpose by injecting into the picture additional insecurity.

"Second. I do not favor enactment of legislation at this session of Congress, because I do not believe that the subject has been adequately studied to the point where the burden has been sufficiently well developed.

"Third. I certainly favor further study of the problem.

"Fourth. I could not take any position with respect to the administration's proposal, because, to my mind, the subject is very involved, and, at the most, difficult to determine the obligations that are being assumed, from a financial standpoint, as well as from a purely economic standpoint.

"Fifth—I believe that the cost of whatever plan is to be adopted should be borne by both the employers as well as by the beneficiaries; i. e., the wage-earner. I take this position because, without some check on the burden on industry, the influence of the political consideration, it is bound, eventually, to have a serious effect on our national economy. We little realize the cumulative effect of all these things, nor do we appreciate that each tends to accentuate the condition which it is supposed to correct.

"Sixth—I have not made a sufficiently careful study to be prepared to take a position with respect to the advisability of contributions by the federal government or by state governments. I would undoubtedly, however, consider it essential that there should be co-ordination between the states for the purpose of having a reasonably common approach to a common problem."

Several insurance executives, as well as other men of affairs, have sought to bring home to Washington and to the public that there can be no such thing as "unemployment insurance."

They fear that the use of the term will sadly mislead workers into expecting what no nation on the face of the earth could possibly guarantee.

This point is pithily put by President F. A. Merrick of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing:

"There is no such thing as unemployment security, nor any practical application in the term unemployment insurance. Some well-considered plan of unemployment reserves would be desirable to cushion temporary unemployment situations."

Workers would be injured most of all were a wrong step taken.

Railroad Bonds Are Higher

NeNw York, Feb. 27 (AP)—Secondary corporate bonds showed some improvement today, particularly lower-priced carrier issues that were sorely depressed in the prevoius session.

Nervousness over the financial plight of a number of Eastern and Western roads that were reported to be nearing reorganizations subsided when a canvas among leading bankers failed to disclose immediate apprehension in that quarter, and gains of as much as 2½ points were made by issues that were heavy losers on Tuesday.

Elect Officers

At the annual meeting of the Security Dealers Association of New England the following officers were re-elected for 1935: Waldo S. Kendall, president; H. Earle Appleton, treasurer; Thomas M. Claflin, secretary, and the board of governors of H. Earle Appleton, Thomas M. Claflin, Charles N. Gregg, Waldo S. Kendall, Benjamin F. White and A. Chester Snow.

CRITICS Bolder THAN IN Past

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

It seems to us that as certain political forces find their personal influence waning other and more conservative interests become a bit bolder in their criticisms.

Thus it is that Richard Whitney tells a Pittsburgh audience that relief and reform do not conflict with recovery when they are guided by men of practical experience who are neither over-zealous nor subversive schemers. For these latter nearly always harbor an innate hostility toward the American system of politics and economics.

* * *

Richard Whitney

Recovery when it comes will come through the efforts of private business. This has always been true in the past and the future will not change the picture. The enterprise of capital and management can find no substitute in federal plans and projects. enterprise of capital and management can find no substitute in federal plans and projects.

Sooner or later the soundness of this thesis will be given proper recognition. Then confidence will truly spread and it will no longer be necessary to resort to inexpedient palliatives which provide nothing other than political fodder. And the markets will begin to look like something worth while.

* * *

Notebook: One after another the key rails have slipped through important resistance levels... Technical recoveries are talked of for the group... But they will be small compensation for a decline into new low ground since late 1933... Rallies in the rails should be sold... Opportunities in the stock market are brighter elsewhere pending good news ... A favorable pension decision by the Supreme Court could be the first of such... And might change the situation.

* * *

As yet the industrials have held their ground in fairly decent fashion. However, it would be pure blindness to overlook the weak spots that do exist. Where our critical prices have been broken we are no longer interested except on a technical basis. A purging process may well be underway and should the list eventually find its feet with the industrials in a position to rally strongly other and less susceptible stocks will be favored

* * *

Briefs: Air Reduction is holding proportionately better than the rest of the industrials... As a one stock barometer it is saying hopeful things about the industrial section ...It will be one of the favored stocks, judging by current tape action... Sears Roebuck is putting up quite a battle around the 33 level ...Sellers evidently are not finding it the easy mark they were led to believe it was by past tape action... We would watch it closely in here.

Wheat Higher

OTHER CEREALS ALSO GAIN

By Associated Press

Chicago, Feb. 27—Wheat scored a late advance of about 1½ cents today, helped by purchasing for operators who earlier had sold on account of easiness of securities.

Much notice was taken of trade comments on lack of subsoil moisture throughout a considerable portion of domestic winter wheat territory and in spring wheat areas both sides of the Canadian boundary.

Forecasts indicated fair weather in sections where moisture is most needed.

Wheat closed firm at virtually the day's top level, ⅞-1½ above yesterday's finish, May 97¼-98, corn ⅛-⅝ up, May 84⅞-85, oats unchanged to ½ higher, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 7 cents advance.

SHARE Prices Work LOWER

WALL STREET IN GLUM MOOD

New York, Feb. 27—The stock market tried to rally under the influence of a little more affable attitude toward the rails today, but after reading mid-week trade statistics traders turned a cold shoulder on the industrials.

By early afternoon recoveries of fractions to a point in the rails were lost or reduced and some of the leading industrials were off major fractions to more than a point.

Steels bore the brunt of a moderate mid-day selling flurry in shares. Bethlehem and Republic preferred issues were off a point or more and declines of substantial fractions appeared in Bethlehem Common, U. S. Steel and American Rolling Mill.

Losses General

Losses of a point or more cropped out in duPont, Johns-Manville, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol and Western Union. Chrysler and American Can lost major fractions and General Motors nearly as much.

Some of the aircraft and oil shares sagged moderately but silver issues were firm in sympathy with the market for the metal.

Wall Street could not get much cheer out of a somewhat more than seasonal decline in electric power production and further recessions in steel ingot output and steel scrap prices as reported by "Iron Age."

Nevertheless the market seemed to have recovered from yesterday's nervous spell over the plight of the railroads. A canvass of well-informed railroad financing quarters resulted in discrediting a number of rumors concerning early prospective reorganization of a number of systems.

Electric Power

Observers noted that the gain of 5 per cent in Electric Power compared with a rise of 7.3 per cent over 1934 scored in the preceding week.

While the slack was described in some measure to the inclusion of the holiday in the week ended February 23, it was noted that the total output had declined more than seasonally.

The Chrysler Corporation reported net profit of $2.19 a share on the capital stock for 1934, compared with $2.78 a share in 1933. Inasmuch as the corporation sold more cars last year than in 1933, analysts set down the shrinkage in net to higher operating costs.

The statement of Howard S. Palmer, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, that the company's cash position has improved since the first of the year and is continuing upward was regarded favorably.

Iron Age noted that steel production had declined 2 points to 48.5 per cent of capacity.

The pound sterling opened at $4.86, off ½ cent. The French franc at 6.64 cents was up .00¼ of a cent.

Boston Market

STOCK PRICES ARE LOWER

Following the trend of prices in the New York market, stocks on the Boston Exchange were generally lower today, with one or two exceptions. American Woolen preferred was among the heavier spots, declining over a point to 37, or within a fraction of its low since July 1, 1933. Economy Grocery Stores was off a point to 17. Fractional recessions were shown by Amoskeag, Boston Elevated and United Shoe Machinery.

The principal exceptions to the decline were Bigelow Sanforn preferred, a very inactive issue, which rose 4½ points to 94, a new 1934-35 high, and New Haven, which rallied $1 to 4⅛, after establishing a record low on Tuesday of 2¾.

Leased line railroad stocks like Providence & Worcester, Old Colony and Boston & Albany, heavy features Tuesday, were not quoted up to early afternoon. Boston & Albany at noon was 100 bid and 105 asked, compared with previous close of 105.

Dollar Steady

By Associated Press

International dollar rates were relatively steady today in quiet trading.

The dollar was a trifle higher in London at 4.86¼ to the pound sterling and the British unit yielded ¼ cent in New York at $4.86.

In Paris the dollar was lower at an equivalent of 6.637 cents to the franc and in New York francs were unchanged at 6.63¾ cents.

The price of bar gold advanced to a new high of 143 shillings 11½ pence ($34.99) a fine ounce in London.

Cotton

New York, Feb. 27 (AP)—Cotton was quiet today, with prices holding generally steady after a somewhat irregular opening.

There was very little pressure against March following yesterday's liquidation, and the price worked up on trade buying or covering, with the general market ruling about net unchanged to 5 points higher in the afternoon.

Friend of the Worker

Roosevelt Administration Seeks to Keep Existing Wage Scales

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his letter to Senator Glass, defending the principle of paying to relief workers, not the prevailing wages in private industry, but relief wages, seeks to quiet the fears of organized labor that this will lower wages in general.

It will do nothing of the kind.

As the President points out in his letter:

"Every action of the administration during the past two years has been directed, first, to the objective of raising wage scales which, from the point of view of public interest, were set at unconscionably low levels; and, secondly, we have constantly followed the objective of preventing reductions in existing wage scales.

"So much for that, except that I might add that both of these objectives are constantly before us and will continue so to be.

"It is an obvious fact—first, that the Federal government and every state government will act to prevent reductions; and, secondly, because public opinion throughout the country, will not sustain reductions.

"I have enough faith in the country to believe that practically 100 per cent of employers are patriotic enough to prevent the lowering of wages. In this thought they will have the full support of the government.

"I think that the record of this administration has demonstrated that in the administering of this legislation I will not permit anything to be done that will result in lowering the wage scale of the nation."

IT is perfectly true, as claimed by the President, that every action of his administration has sought to prevent "reduction in existing wage scales."

That the administration's course has been effective is shown in the great number of cases, involving both organized and unorganized labor, in which wages have been raised, or reductions prevented.

The President is also on strong ground when he says that public opinion throughout the country will not sustain reductions.

Let labor trust the President's purposes, as the country at large trusts them.

THE people of the United States are anxious to do all that is humanly possible to supply the needs and relieve the sufferings of the unemployed.

But there is no telling how long the necessity for such relief will continue.

And it is a wise government that husbands resources which are not boundless and pins its hopes, as well as shapes its efforts, to the broadening of private employment and the avoidance of any measure that will retard it—because it is the recovery of normal business activity alone that will conquer unemployment.

Dr. Holmes Returns

Soviet Tyranny Worse

A COWARDLY silence will envelop our flossy native-born professors who ballyhoo for Russian Communism when they read the about-face of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, formerly one of the staunchest supporters of Joe Stalin's corpse-factory.

Dr. Holmes says:

"THE TYRANNY OF SOVIET RUSSIA SEEMS TO BE GETTING WORSE RATHER THAN BETTER. MONSTROUS THINGS ARE BEING DONE. THE STALIN MASSACRE . . . WAS AS GHASTLY AS ANYTHING OUR BLOODY AGE HAS KNOWN."

Dr. Holmes is not a capitalist, a "rugged individualist" or a professional flag-waver.

He is an honest man sickened to the core of his stomach by the crimes of a criminal state that he himself has fought for during fifteen years.

He will be denounced by the foreign confederates of thug-governed Russia operating in America as a "renegade" and a "sell-out" because he has the courage of his humanity.

At the same time that Dr. Holmes threw the Stalin outfit into the river, Russian Ambassador Troyanovsky defended the Russian assassinations in a speech at Columbia University.

Welcome back to America, Dr. Holmes—and we hope that Troyanovsky will soon be welcomed back PERMANENTLY to HIS country.

Boston's Babe Ruth

16-Year Prodigal Returns

Babe Ruth is coming back home.

It has been a long time, 16 years to be exact, since he departed from Fenway Park and the Red Sox.

But never in the hearts of Boston and New England baseball fans were his accomplishments New York's alone.

Always was he looked on as Boston's pride.

For as a gangling youngster he found himself with the champion Red Sox and his career has always dated from that time.

Babe Ruth is coming back home with the rival National League Braves. But not even the most partisan Red Sox rooter begrudges this.

It is enough that he is back. And may the finish of his career be lengthy with every moment of it spent in Boston.

'Pink Slip' Repeal

Chamber Demands It

The Boston Chamber of Commerce goes on record as demanding repeal of the "pink slip" requirement of the 1934 Federal Revenue Act.

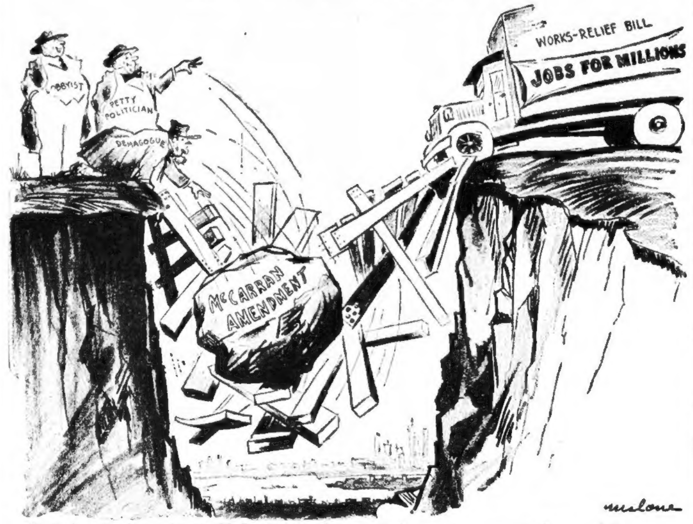
The requirement is pronounced an invasion of the taxpayer's private affairs.

The taxpayer ought by now to be pretty well used to having his private affairs invaded.

And to being subjected to a multiplicity of legal hold-ups, including the Federal and State income taxes.

The local Chamber would have done better to have gone a step farther and to have demanded the repeal of the these taxes, specially designed to "soak the thrifty."

THE WRECKING CREW



By their action in passing the McCarran amendment to the Administration's works' relief bill, the Senate group has endangered work relief for more than 3,000,000 men.

This group expects the House of Representatives to undo its work. While there is time, let them have courage enough to undo it themselves.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Should A "Mother's Right" Be Challenged?

What amazing nonsense is uttered, sometimes, by the smartest people. Meaning, in this case, that lady whom I, in common with 120 million other Americans, love and admire—Kathleen Norris, and her recent remarks on a "mother's rights."

Elsie Robinson

No one on earth knows more about family life than kind Kathleen. So large is her heart she has Mass Mothered not only her own chicks, but broods of other helpless young things.

However, no one has a shrewder knowledge of or a more honest contempt for the selfishness, stupidity and downright cruelty which often masquerades under the beautiful name of motherhood.

Yet, in speaking of the recent custody contest between poor little Gloria Vanderbilt's mother and aunt she writes—

"Only in extraordinary circumstances ought one ever be permitted to bring a suit against a child's mother, or make a claim that can supersede that of a mother. There ought to be a basic law on this subject."

This is truly an amazing suggestion. The subject under discussion, a child, is both our most precious and most helpless national possession.

Upon the training of that child depends not only the happiness and welfare of many individuals but the future of our country.

Immeasurable evil may flow from him if he is brought up carelessly, stupidly or viciously.

The most doting love, unless backed by brains and character, may change that small creature into a public nuisance or an actual monster.

Yet, Mrs. Norris would give a mother complete authority over her child and make it illegal to challenge that authority!

Does she specify what kind of a mother? Does she outline the training which should be given a young woman to prepare her for such tremendous power, such terrifying responsibility?

CHILD'S ATTITUDE

She does not. Just ANY mother, providing she isn't crazy or criminal, should be granted these rights. She may not have the brains of a gnat. She may be lazy, silly, vain, completely lacking in current information, but as long as she isn't crooked or cuckoo she should reign supreme

The child's own action proves the righteousness of such a course, says Mrs. Norris.

"Children cling to their mothers as little animals cling to theirs; there is safety, there is complete sympathy, where Mother is, there is love."

Which same listens lovely. But just between a couple of old cradle rockers, Kathleen Mavourneen, you know 'Tisn't So! A child's attitude toward its mother is no test whatever of that mother's fitness.

As every Child Welfare Worker knows, a child faced by strangers will invariably cling to its mother, even though its body be a mass of bruises inflicted by that mother.

Does this prove love on either side? It does not. It simply proves that the child prefers the evil it knows to the evil it doesn't.

There is only one worse test of a mother's fitness than a child's attitude, and this Mrs. Norris proceeds to quote: "If a man in his senses and of his own free will makes a woman his wife and the mother of his child, then that gives her the right, sole right, in the case of his death, unless insanity or extreme cruelty unfit her."

RULE IN REVERSE

But lady, lady, how often does any sappy, sentimental male make a woman "a wife and mother—in his senses and of his own free will?" And doesn't a poor kid have enough bad breaks without being forevermore bound by the bum choice papa made in an off moment?

Does Mrs. Norris, or anyone else, suggest that this rule should also work on the reverse—i. e., that papa's right should be unchallenged?

No, indeed, Papa's ALWAYS under suspicion. Yet the mere fact of physical birth no more establishes a mother's fitness than it does a father's.

The conception and birth of a child should be the most serious and sacred act on earth. But unless backed by intelligent study and service, human birth is actually no more exalting than cow birth.

There is absolutely nothing in travail, per se, to change a ga-ga moron into a great mother. And I can't imagine anything more cockeyed in a principle, or disastrous in consequence than a law which would forbid any challenge of a mother's supremacy.

We do not allow a merchant to embark upon even the most modest business without some questioning—some proof that his venture is for the common good.

We spread our federal protection over ducks and guinea pigs, buzzards and swine, oranges and sugar beets. Should the most expensive industry of all, that of motherhood, go unquestioned—the most valuable product, the child, alone lack protection?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Feb. 27—Louis Bromfield is taking literature and playwrighting in one of the biggest strides of his era. He popped over from France recently to stand by while three of his plays went into production. Between rehearsals he touched up a finished novel and completed a travel book on India.

O. O. McIntyre

Next to Robert Sherwood, he is likely the tallest playwright, measuring six feet three. Most of his writing is done in an ancient chateau he refurbished at Senlis, a home by a mill stream. But he pegs his hat once a year at the Algonquin to talk things over with editors and producers.

Bromfield and Ernest Hemingway, young strugglers of the Paris Latin Quarter, popped into notice about the same time. Each a protege after a fashion of Gertrude Stein, who maintained something of a salon for those trying so desperately to break into print.

Bromfield is a native of Mansfield, O., the locale of his epic novel, "The Farm," and his journalistic pinfeathers sprouted as a leg man for the New York City News Association. His most successful work was "The Green Bay Tree," published when he was 27. And his average has been high since.

There is usually a chuckle in a columnist's mail. Today a clipping from a magazine I do not recognize showing two poised masculine adagio dancers gazing upward in bewilderment. Says one accusingly to the other: "Well, where did you throw her?"

Many of the gags and practical jokes of the town are incubated over the late afternoon and midnight coffee cups at Lindy's. Here the flip talkers and think-uppers of a fast one on the other fellow collect.

The regulars include Lou Holtz, Abe Lyman, Harry Richman, Arthur Caesar, Phil Baker, Frisco and a dozen more professional clowns and mimes. Plus a sprinkling of Broadway columnists and a mugg or so from Variety.

Lindy's, unlike many forums of other days, has no "on the cuff" patronage. Lindy, a soft-spoken, kindly man knows the plight of many restaurateurs, the victims of false fellowship. The wind-up in the empty-pocketed glory of that meaningless salute: "A good fellow when he had it!"

Joe Zelli, after another restaurant experiment in America, may pull up stakes for that dear Paree again. The depression, for the moment at least, has crimped the style of the Zellis of the world.

They were a likeable band of cafe men who depended upon personal flattery and the blare of jazz to make dining exciting. In their stead, the demand is for well cooked food, vintage wine, checks within reason. And no noise.

Of notables who promenade the New York highways, none expresses the cold austerity of the learned Judge Samuel Seabury. He is a whiskerless Justice Hughes for inciting stand-offishness.

His smile has the brittle glint of coral and his piercing eyes the bright chill of the Polar star.

I walked a block or so behind him on Madison avenue the other afternoon, assailed by the unworthy and impish idiocy suddenly to tweak his calf and bark like a dog. Overwhelming dignity affects me that way. A weakness that does much to promote ambulance riding.

There are many who give the art of walking a certain something. The late Otto Kahn, for instance. His saunter up the avenue became somewhat of a daily triumph. Bernard Baruch has a stride that stands out in the crowd. Irvin Cobb, quite unconsciously, appeared to take up the entire sidewalk.

Albert Payson Terhune has the swing of a Viking. And then, of course, there's that bent-over rush that has so long been the trade mark of George M. Cohan.

A number of people went to any play in which Hope Williams appeared, chiefly to see her loose-jointed swing across the stage. It became the ambition of most girls of the finishing schools. Gracie Allen has a skippy stride that adds panache to her breathless enthusiasm.

Ziegfeld paid Dolores $800 a week for her slinky drag, and experts of movie reactions claim that a great percentage of Garbo's popularity is due to the majestic grace of her sweep across the stage.

A sophisticated modern with whom we were jockeyed at tea cooed to my wife: "I suppose your husband, like all artists, maintains a separate establishment!" And she's done nothing but whoop and holler since, for goodness sake.

"Share Wealth" Plans

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

It is interesting and perhaps highly significant to observe that Huey P. Long has recruited an old-fashioned evangelist to help him run up his "Every Man a King" movement, as he starts for Georgia.

Edwin C. Hill

One can state flatly that there never was a colonizing or economically challenging enterprise that wasn't based upon religion. It seems to be the only thing which will supply the emotional amalgam necessary to hold such groups together.

Witness the Mormons, in their long and terrible trek across the plains and their triumph in building a great, stable commonwealth, with religion the keynote of the arch.

Also the great Oneida colony of New York and numerous smaller groups, down to that strangely persistent Halcyon colony of California.

SINCLAIR FOLLOWING

Upton Sinclair drew a vast following of religious people in Southern California, with many clergymen supporting him. His past records of unorthodoxy, disclosed in the latter days of the campaign, probably turned the tide and prevented California from having a "share the wealth" government ahead of Louisiana—if Huey Long ever gets that far, and, personally, I don't think he will.

There have been innumerable Socialist colonies in both North and South America. None has succeeded.

A few years ago there was what seemed to be a rather sensible experiment run by Job Harriman and Frank Wolfe of Los Angeles.

In many ways, it didn't seem half so radical as many things done by Washington in the depression years.

They had good land, plenty of water, carefully selected trained colonists and a reasonable amount of finance.

They produced wealth co-operatively, and they marketed directly, to cut out the middlemen.

There was an emotional fervor which started it off with a bang, but when that died down, something was lacking. The thing just didn't work. The colonists became bored and quarrelsome and drifted away.

RUSSIAN EXPERIMENT

One hundred years ago Robert Owen, the great British liberal and humanitarian, was organizing "share the wealth" colonies in Indiana.

There were brains and high purpose behind them. They, too, languished and were forgotten.

So it is with all colonization schemes built upon the assumption that groups of men may be guided by reason and science, rather than emotion.

Russia has the present most notorious "share the wealth" movement, and it has declared savage war against religion. But their Marxian dogmas are an exact and effective substitute.

Marxism is essentially religious, since it finds a pattern of inevitability outside the individual, and it is nothing less than mediaeval theology with which the Soviets have indoctrinated their millions.

Ever since he got his first political job as tick inspector, Huey Long has bludgeoned his enemies with quotations from the Bible.

For many years he always had a Bible in his hip pocket, and with it he has confounded the mighty—at least in the eyes of his followers.

BENNETT RELIGIOUS

Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, now switching bewilderingly to his "New Deal" campaign, is another political leader who knows the efficacy of religion in public appeals.

He is a statesman of intelligence and ability, and perhaps this an inept sequence here, but he, too, devoutly religious, has built his great political career on an emotionalized appeal of basically religious derivation.

So far as any detached view of what he proposes to do is concerned, his plan seems to hold puzzling contradictions.

He started out several months ago by invoking "government intervention, and government control" in business, and now he seems to be telling parliament that while the government will run pretty nearly everything, it won't really bother anybody.

Again we have an economic thesis which will perhaps not bear scrutiny, but the Canadians are out cheering for it.

The important thing seems to be not what politicians say, but HOW they say it, and Mr. Bennett and Senator Long, too, know that it is a good idea to say it with a Bible. Then come the psaltery and harp, proclaiming a new heaven and a new earth.

'Stand by Constitution,' Washington's Advice

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Seldom if ever before, has the responsibility for government throughout the United States been so completey in the hands of one party as it is today. Both Houses of Congress have a large Democrate majority.

In at least three-fourths of the States of the Union both Houses of the Legislature are controlled by one-party majorities. Republican majorities exist in only six State Legislatures and in three others party representation is equal in either the House or the Senate.

Nor does Democratic control end with the Legislatures. Thirty-eight of the forty-eight State Governors belong to the same party. And forty-three of the forty-eight State Legislatures are now in session.

TWO PROCEDURES

This extraordinary condition of affairs leads Henry W. Toll, executive director of the American Legislators' Association, to suggest the possibility of speedy amendment of the Constitution through the initiative of the States instead of through Congress.

In the past the Constitution always has been amended on the initiative of Congress. This is only one of two methods of amendments for which the Constitution provides. The method hitherto unused is on this wise:

When two-thirds of the states by legislative action request, Congress shall call a convention for proposing amendments to the Constitution. Once in session, such a convention would not be limited to the proposed amendments which prompted the states to start the amending process.

Once in session, the convention could rewrite the entire Constitution if its members saw fit to do so. But to be adopted, each amendment or the revised constitution would require the affirmative vote of three-fourths of the legislative convention.

It would hardly seem probable that the United States should be called on at this time to bear another burden in the form of an attempt either by the would-be Communists or the would-be Fascists to junk the Constitution of the United States through the initiative of the states.

WORTH READING

But attempt may be made now or at a later period of the nation's life. When, as and if it is made, wise men will turn to the Farwell Address to find out what guidance the Father of his Country bequeathed to his people in this regard. And they will not turn in vain, for here is what Washington says:

"Towards the preservation of your government, and the permanency of your happy state, it is requisite, not only that you steadily discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretexts.

"One method of assault may be to effect in the forms of the forms of the constitution, alterations, which impair the energy of the system and thus to undermine what cannot be directly overthrown.

"In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the character of governments as of other human institutions; that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country; that fatality in chances, upon and credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion.

"And remember especially that, for the efficient management of your common interests, in a country so extensive as ours, a government of much vigor as is consistent with the perfect security of liberty is indispensable.

"Liberty will find in such a government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian."

Among politicians in a publicity-seeking age, George Washington may be the Forgotten American, the Farewell Address may be no longer considered worth reading. But among the plain people of this and other lands this will never be because "they embodied in him the noblest possibilities of humanity."
